HOOVER AND MELLON WARN VETERAN BILL MEANS TAX INCREASE

President Acts Against Measure in Letter to Watson.

SENATE SCHEDULED TO TAKE VOTE TODAY

Reed Plan, Offered at White House Meeting, to Be Submitted.

PENDING LEGISLATION TO COST $102,000,000

G. O. P. House Leaders Call Caucus Tomorrow as Veto Notice Response.

(Associated Press).

President Hoover yesterday warned that the veterans' relief bill to be voted upon today in the Senate, meant a raise in taxes, and administration leaders in the Senate immediately moved to put forward a substitute acceptable to him.

The President made known his opposition to the bill in a letter to Senator Watson, of Indiana, the Republican leader, which was given out at the White House. He said it not only meant increased taxes, but it was unequitable to the World War veterans and was far more than they themselves had asked.

At a White House conference, Senator Reed (Republican), of Pennsylvania, submitted a substitute measure which is undrestood to have received administration approval.

Caucus Tomorrow Night.

Those attending the conference included Secretary Mellon, Senator Watson, Director Hines of the Veterans' Bureau, Secretary Hurley and Undersecretary Mills of the Treasury, in addition to Senator Reed.

Senator Watson said last night that the Reed substitute would be offered in the Senate today. He was hopeful of approval. The House already has passed the measure disapproved yesterday by the President.

Responding to the notice of a veto to the legislation, House administration leaders have called a Republican caucus for tomorrow night. If the Senate approves the substitute, that will be considered at the caucus. If the Senate insists upon the pending measure, an early adjournment is unlikely unless veterans' relief legislaiton is deferred until next session.

Legion Urges Adoption.

Estimating the immediate cost of the Senate veterans relief bill at $102,000,000, President Hoover said the original program of the American Legion embraced an outlay of only $35,000,000 annually. Senator Watson intends to offer the American Legion program if the Reed substitute is defeated.

Meanwhile, the American Legion through its weekly bulletin, yesterday urged adoption of the Senate measure.

Mr. Hoover said in his letter to Senator Watson that the Government already had incurred a probable deficit next year due to relief of unemployment through the public building program.

The Executive also inclosed a letter from Director Hines, of the Veteran's Bureau, asserting that the legislation to liberalize compensations to World War veterans creates "grave inequalities, injustices, and discriminations among veterans" and contains "future dangers to both the public and the veterans."

Notice to Congress.

The President notified Congress "we should either have a sound plan now or should have more time for determination of national policy upon established principles in dealing with these questions for the future."

This sentence was regarded as notice to Congress either to adopt a bill suitable to the administration or to put the question over for future consideration.

Congress once this session overwhelmingly overrode a veto of the President on a Spanish War veterans' bill, but advocates of the pending veterans' relief measure were not so certain last night of success in such a venture. A course will be adopted probably today in Congress.

Hoover Estimates Cost.

Mr. Hoover in his letter to Senator Watson declared the measure to be voted upon today by the Senate would add $102,000,000 next year to the present annual expenditure of $511,000,000 for World War veterans by the Government. He said the ultimate cost of the measure would be $225,000,000.

Text of Hoover Note On Veterans' Relief

The text of President Hoover's letter yesterday to Senator Watson, of Indiana, the Republican leader, upon the pending World War veterans relief legislation, follows:

In accordance with our discussion, I am sending herewith communications from Secretary Mellon and Gen. Hines, director of the Veterans' Bureau, on the subject of the World War veterans' legislation now before the Congress, showing the result of their investigation into the effect of the bill reported this week to the Senate. These memorandums confirm the views which I have expressed during the past few weeks and I believe the Congress and the public should be informed thereon.

Gen. Hines states that the bill which has been passed by the House of Representatives will add directly to our present expenditure for World War veterans (at present $511,000,000 per annum) by $181,000,000 for the first year, and increasing annually until it reacnes a possible additional sum of $400,000,000 a year. This bill

CANNON ISSUES NEW TINKHAM CHALLENGE

House Member Called Upon to Send Out Speech in Full, Under His Signature.

OMISSION IS CHARGED

(Associated Press.)

Bishop James Cannon, Jr., said in a statement yesterday that Representative Tinkham (Republican), Massachusetts, had not said in his signed statement some of the things the Bay State member had stated in the House under congressional immunity relative to the churchman's handling of funds contributed for the anti-Smith campaign.

Tinkham recently accepted the challenge of the Methodist leader growing out of the investigation of the bishop by the Senate lobby committee to repeat the things he said about the churchman on the House floor. In his statement yesterday, Bishop Cannon said the acceptance was carefully worded and that it omitted several accusations made in the House.

Bishop Cannon challenged Tinkham to "have several copies of his entire speech typewritten, signing them personally, then sending one to me and one to each of several other indicated persons, thus effectually disclaiming immunity for his entire speech as actually delivered."

The text of Bishop Cannon's statement read:

"I have read the carefully worded statement of 135 words, purporting to be a paraphrase of the 3,000-word speech of Congressman Tinkham, made in the House of Representatives on June 17, which speech I called upon him to give out over his personal signature, free from congressional immunity.

"In his speech of June 17, among other things, Congressman Tinkham said: 'The statement of Bishop Cannon that he "made no report of such receipts and expenditures, as none was required by law," was a falsehood,

Deficit of $100,000,000 for Fiscal Year Seen, Secretary Says.

HOPES CUT INCOME RATE CAN CONTINUE

Holds 1931 Funds Can't Support $225,000,000 Relief Burden.

TAKES INTO ACCOUNT FOREIGN PAYMENTS

Further Expenditures May Boost Levy Above 1928 Act Provisions.

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Mellon said yesterday that a deficit in the Treasury of $100,000,000 at the close of the fiscal year of 1931 is now indicated and that if the present reduced rate of income tax is made applicable to 1930 incomes, a deficit of $180,000,000 is likely.

In a letter to President Hoover upon the pending World War veterans' relief legislation, the Secretary said receipts for the fiscal year of 1931 would be inadequate to suport the additional burden estimated by the Veterans' Bureau at $102,000,000 for 1931 and $225,000,000 annually in ultimate cost.

"In fairness to the country," Mr. Mellon said, "I feel that Congress should be informed that if expenditures are further increased now, taxes must be in December."

Mellon Cites Danger.

Secretary Mellon said his estimates are predicated upon a not unhopeful attitude in respect of future business developments.

The present state of business, he continued, must be accompanied by an inevitable reduction in Government income and that the Treasury was vitally interested in not closing the door to hope of continuing the tax reduction. He said he hoped conditions would improve so he could recommend to Congress next December, a continuation of the reduction.

Mr. Mellon called the attention of President Hoover to the fact that 2,095,000 persons would be affected if the tax reduction were not continued. This number of persons, he said, whose net income is less than $10,000, would have to pay approximately $28,000,000 more in taxes if the old rates were restored. Corporations also, he said, would be required to pay $90,000,000 more "at a time when the Government should endeavor to relieve rather than to increase the burdens on industry."

Difficulty of Forecasting.

The reduction for the calendar year 1929 of 1 per cent upon normal and corporation incomes cut approximately $80,000,000 from the incomes for the fiscal years of 1930 and 1931.

Secretary Mellon said:

"I have your memorandum stating that the director of the Veterans Bureau estimates the cost in the fiscal year 1931 of H. R. 10381, as amended and reported by the Senate finance committee, to be $102,000,000 and the ultimate cost to be $225,000,000 annually. You ask me to give

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., June 22.—Back from his Antarctic conquests and amid the scenes of his childhood the heart strings of Rear Admiral Richard Evelyn Byrd were touched today at an outpouring of admiration on the part of his home-town citizens, who, with other thousands from nearby States, cheered and applauded his every appearance.

The climax was reached in the late afternoon when surrounded by a crowd of 15,000 people Mayor F. A. Shryock presented the central figure of a thansgiving service with a large silver bowl in the name of the city council on behalf of the people of his native city.

Mayor Shryock told Admiral Byrd it was a simple expression of the love and esteem the people of Winchester have for his lovable character and innate modesty.

Voice Expresses Emotion.

A cheer went up as Byrd strode to the speaker's stand to receive the gift. In a voice broken by the emotion he felt, Admiral Byrd declared no gift he had received from any source since he had been carrying the American flag to the top and the bottom of the earth had touched him so deeply and sincerely.

He thanked the "citizens of my native city from the bottom of my heart," he said, as he concluded a brief speech and sat down amid another outburst of cheering. The celebration in honor of Admiral Byrd was distinctly religious, designed to be a simple and dignified expression of thanksgiving for the safe return to his family and home city from perilous adventures in the Antarctic wastes in the interest of scientific exploration.

Englewood, N. J., June 22 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—A son was born today to Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh in the same house at the top of a high hill in Englewood where Mrs. Lindbergh, the daughter of Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow, first saw the light of day exactly 24 years ago.

The baby, weighing almost 8 pounds, arrived at about 2:30 p. m. Mrs. Lindbergh and the child were reported in fine condition tonight. Col. Lindbergh, it was said, took the event calmly, whereas Ambassador Morrow, who has just been nominated Republican candidate for senator from New Jersey, was described as jubilant.

The formal announcement of the birth of a boy was made late this afternoon by a "friend of the family." From other sources it was learned that Mrs. Lindbergh had invited several intimate friends for a quiet celebration of her birthday today. This party had to be put off for the birthday of the infant, who has been described in advance as the "child of the century."

All immediate members of the family remained in the Morrow home—in which Anne Spencer Morrow and Charles Augustus Lindbergh were married May 27, 1929—throughout the day. The watchers who had been posted outside the gates for several days in anticipation of the event were unaware of the arrival of the stork, just as they had missed the wedding after a long siege.

But before evening they were told the news by the army of messenger boys, who arrived loaded with flowers and congratulatory telegrams that undoubtedly had been ordered by friends and well-wishers weeks ago.

There was a rush for telephones and then the reporters returned for more details, only to find that for the time being, at least, none was to be forthcoming. A complete statement was promised "later" by one of Ambassador Morrow's secretaries.

No indication of what the Lindbergh baby will be named was given. There is a probability that it will be christened Dwight Morrow Lindbergh.

Mayor Kept in Dark.

Such secrecy surrounded the birth of the Lindbergh heir that Mayor C. P. Kitchell, of Englewood, who was in the Morrow home as late as 5 o'clock this afternoon, knew nothing about it until notified by newspapermen.

"I am a bit surprised," Mayor Kitchell said, "because I left Ambassador Morrow after 5 o'clock and he never said a word about it, and he certainly must have known. Come to think of it, a gentleman passed me in a bit of hurry while I was in the house, but he wouldn't talk to me. Now I see he must have been a doctor."

Soldier Given Medal For Peace-Time Valor

(Associated Press.)

The War Department officially recognized the peace-time heroism of one of its enlisted men yesterday in announcing the award of the Soldier's Medal to Master Sergt. Ira Partin, now on duty at Nashville, Tenn.

Partin, who was born in Pinesville, Ky., and enlisted from Aiken, S. C., saved the life of a young woman pinned beneath the top of an overturned automobile, near Franklin, Tenn., April 21.

A speeding car, the citation stated, passed an automobile in which the sergeant was riding, at an excessive rate and left the road. In trying to regain the center of the road, the car turned over several times, breaking the gasoline line. Partin jumped from his car, the report set forth, and "without regard for his own personal danger, although warned that an explosion was likely to occur at any moment, lifted the car unassisted and held it until assistance arrived."

Ruth Elder Bruised By Fall From Horse

New York, June 22 (A.P.).—Mrs. Ruth Elder Camp, today disclosed she was injured last Monday when she fell from a horse in Central Park. She said her back was bruised and that the horse stepped on her right hand, causing her to spend three days in bed.

Mrs. Camp, as Ruth Elder, was rescued at sea in 1927, when she attempted to fly to Europe. She was married on August 30, 1929, to Walter Camp, Jr., son of the late football authority.

NAVAL PACT TO WIN IN COMMITTEE VOTE

JOHNSON FORCES WANE

The Senate committee on foreign relations this morning will adopt the report drafted by Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, favoring ratification of the London naval treaty. The Borah report is certain to have a majority of from 10 to 11 votes.

Senator Hiram Johnson, of California, leader of the antitreaty bitterenders, will submt a minority report stigmatizing the naval agreement as "un-American, unjust and unfair" to the safety and interests of the Nation.

It is expected that either today or the next day the foreign relations committee majority report will be sent to the Senate. Senator Borah said the exact time depended on when he can finish his draft. It will then be left over for action at the special session of the Senate which President Hoover is pledged to, and will, call.

According to Senator Borah and Senator James E. Watson, of Indiana, the Senate majority leader, the special treaty session probably will not be convened until after the Fourth of July, probably July 7. It is the opinion of the majority of the senators that the treaty will be ratified after not more than four or five days' debate.

In the vote to be taken today in the foreign relations committee, Sen-

Captain Chases Graf On Runaway Flight

Zeppelin Breaks Away at Landing and Leaves 45 Passengers.

Berlin, June 22 (A.P.).—With her deserted commander pursuing her by airplane from Hamburg, the Graf Zeppelin this evening arrived safely at Staaken Air Field after an eventful excursion to the great seaport.

Capt. Ernest Lehmann and Capt. Hans von Schiller were, through an accident, left on the ground at Hamburg. They and 31 passengers had just landed from the airship, when under fierce heat, the Graf Zeppelin gained excessive buoyancy, broke loose and rapidly rose. Some of the landing crew clamored aboard, but the officers were unable to make it.

After cruising about vainly for half an hour, the subordinate navigating officer wirelessed that he was unable to make another landing for the two officers and 45 passengers who hoped to make the trip back to Berlin.

Capt. Lehmann and Capt. von Schiller were obliged to charter an airplane to fly back to Berlin and rejoin their errant airship. The Graf safely reached the Staaken Air Field at 9 p. m.

The accident had no untoward consequences, barring the humorous pursuit of the airship by the Zeppelin's officers.

The airship yesterday had made an all-night flight to Copenhagen and back and was greeted at 7 a. m. today by a vast crowd of Berliners. Dr. Hugo Eckener left the airship for a visit to the world power conference, Capt. Lehmann taking command for the Hamburg excursion.

Lack of ballast prevented the Graf from redescending to the Hamburg Air Field for Capt Lehmann and the passengers.

Capt. Flemming, who had remained on board, commanded the airship on the flight back to the Staaken Field near Berlin. Three of the Hamburg landing crew made the trip as involuntary passengers.

The Graf was safely moored shortly after 9 o'clock.

Plans were being made to smuggle Meers out of Juarez to Chihuahua City to prevent possible violence. Federal soldiers had been guarding the Juarez jail for several days. Participants in the demonstration started a march toward the American consulate and the home of Miguel Garza,

This fund was said to be especially designed for propaganda in Chicago, Philadelphia and Baltimore.

dor Morrow, containing scarcely any of the details which everyone wants to know about such an occurrence, was issued over the objections of Col. Lindbergh, it was learned.

Ambassador Morrow and his younger daughter, Elisabeth, this evening attended a reception for the school teachers of Englewood at the home of Mrs. Charles Hulst, a member of the board of election.

Ambassador Most Happy.

"I am the happiest grandfather in the world," beamed the ambassador, who is to leave for Mexico Tuesday.

Mrs. Lindbergh, despite her approaching motherhood, clung to her custom of accompanying her famous husband on his flights. Only last Tuesday they flew together to Hartford from Teterboro Airport, N. J.

The trip was made in the same Lockheed Sirius low-winged monoplane in which Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh made their record-breaking flight from Los Angeles to New York Easter Sunday. Col. Lindbergh at the time declared his wife did the greater part of the work on the flight, acting as navigator and copilot.

Two weeks ago Mrs. Lindbergh joined her husband in a test flight of a parasol type monoplane to Newark Airport. On both this trip and the one to Hartford Mrs. Lindbergh remained in the cockpit of the plane until the colonel was ready to return.

Political Activities Abandoned.

The first definite indication of the expected birth came early this month when Ambassador Morrow's wife abandoned her political activities in behalf of the ambassador's primary campaign to devote herself to her daughter.

Preparations made for Mrs. Lindbergh's reception in Presbyterian Hospital were cancelled several days ago and hospital equipment and nurses were brought to the Morrow home. It was reported that Dr. E. M. Hawks, of New York, attended Mrs. Lindbergh, but this statement could not be confirmed.

The romance of Lindy and Anne Morrow was born and developed in the air. Their marriage license was obtained May 20, 1929, the second anniversary of his epochal flight from New York to Paris.

Lindbergh met his future bride in Mexico City, where he stopped on his first Pan-American good-will tour. Ambassador Morrow was then engaged in the none-too-simple task of establishing a friendly understanding with our southern neighbors. He appreciated Lindbergh's help and received him warmly.

Girl Takes First Flight.

It was during this period that Miss Morrow took her first flight and Lindbergh acted as her pilot. They were as much together as the famous flyer's numerous public engagements would allow.

Next year Lindbergh visited Mexico City again, ostensibly for a hunting trip. Anne Morrow arrived about the same time and the two made frequent sight-seeing trips. The Colonel seemed to have lost his habitual cool detachment from anything except airplanes.

The formal announcement of their betrothal, February 12, 1929, was made by Ambassador Morrow just before Lindbergh's fourth visit to the Mexican capital. The flier experienced his first serious mishap in a plane during this stay.

He had taken his fiancee for a short flight. The plane lost a landing wheel as it left the ground. When Lindbergh attempted to land on Valbuena Field a few minutes later, the plane overturned. Lindbergh suffered a dislocated shoulder but Miss Morrow escaped injury.

Went Up Again Next Day.

The next day, with his arm bound to his body, Lindbergh took his fiancee up again in the same plane.

After their marriage Col. Lindbergh turned over the Spirit of St. Louis—the other half of the famous "We"—to the Smithsonian Institution, and from then on his wife became his constant flying companion.

They spent a secret honeymoon up the New England coast in a motor cruiser. From then on they traveled mostly through the air. Mrs. Lindbergh was with her husband last autumn on a flight to open new air mail routes to South America. On this flight they sighted some lost cities of the ancient Mayan civilization. Subsequently the Lindberghs returned with scientists and made detailed photographs of the region from the air.

In the last few months Mrs. Lindbergh, as well as her husband, became much interested in gliders. She became quite expert in negotiating the motorless aircraft and obtained a pilot's license for them.

Byrd to Congratulate Lindberghs on New Son

Winchester, Va., June 22 (A.P.).—Speaking for his brother, Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, Thomas B. Byrd at his home here tonight said the admiral rejoices at the birth of a son to Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh at Englewood, N. J., today.

The admiral was resting after four days of strenuous celebration honoring his return from the Antarctic when the news reached him at the home of his mother. He will send his congratulations tonight before leaving for New York, Tom Byrd said

Woman Gets 20 Years; Decapitated Spouse

Covington, Va., June 22 (A.P.).—Mrs. Mattie Thompson, of Clifton Forge, was convicted of first degree murder in connection with the death of her husband, Wirt Thompson, May 29, by a jury in Allegheny County Circuit Court here last night. The jury recommended a twenty-year sentence. It deliberated two hours and seven minutes.

Motion to set the verdict aside was overruled by Judge Haden, of Fincastle.

Jack J. Canivan, a boarder in the Thompson home, also indicted with Mrs. Thompson for the slaying, probably will go to trial July 16, court officials said. The body of Thompson, a Chesapeake & Ohio shopman, was found on the sleeping porch of his home in the suburbs of Clifton Forge almost decapitated.

MEXICO IS THRILLED BY LINDBERGH BABY

Officials and Others Hasten to Congratulate New Parents of Son.

ROMANCE BUDDED THERE

Mexico City, June 22 (A.P.).—Word of the arrival of a son to Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh this afternoon at Ambassador Morrow's Englewood estate brought a thrill to the country, where passed most of the courtship of the colonel and his lady.

The brief announcement of the child's birth quickly spread among government circles. A host of congratulatory cables were quickly sent to the Lindberghs and to Amabassador Morrow.

Advised of the birth, President Ortiz Rubio told the Associated Press: "Through the American press I felicitate Col. Lindbergh and his wife. I shall hasten to extend my congratulations personally."

Mexico feels that she occupies a prominent place in the history of the Lindbergh romance. The couple met in the United States, but it was during the colonel's visit here after his flight from Washington in December, 1927, that he first became seriously interested in Anne and she in him.

The romance first budded at Ambassador Morrow's beautiful Cuernavac estate, where the colonel was being entertained during his goodwill visit. Three or four times subsequently Lindbergh returned to Mexico to see Anne. It was at Valbuena Field that he gave his future bride her first lessons in piloting an airplane.

There also they "cracked up" together in the colonel's airplane, in February, 1929, when the machine lost a wheel.

93,276 Ask Recall Of Detroit Mayor

Court Order, However, May Prevent Election Sought by Bowles' Foes.

Detroit, June 22 (A.P.).—Employes of the city election commision today completed checking signatures on the petition to recall Mayor Charles Bowles. They found 93,276 valid signatures of registered voters or 3,536 more than the number needed to force a recall election.

There still is a possibility, however, that court action may prevent the recall being brought to a vote. Supporters of Mayor Bowles yesterday obtained a temporary restraining order, forbidding City Clerk Richard Reading to name a date for the election. Tomorrow attorneys for the mayor will go before Judge Arthur Webster, of the Circuit Court, asking a permanent injunction on grounds that taxpayers' money would be expended for the election.

Leaders of the recall movement also will ask an injunction to prevent the mayor and his supporters from using the taxpayers' money in their effort to prevent the recall election.

Airman Near Death In Half-Mile Fall

8,000 See Parachutist in Distress as Device Only Half Opens.

New York, June 22 (N.Y.W. N. S.).—A professional parachutist fell 2,700 feet this afternoon at Barren Island, Brooklyn, in sight of 8,000 spectators, his speed only partly checked by a half-opened parachute, and lived. He is Harold Hardy, 25, of the Bronx, and was testing a parachute for a manufacturing company.

Knocked unsonscious by the terrific impact of the landing, he was taken to Unity Hospital in Brooklyn, where he was said to be in critical condition from internal injuries. Physicians said tonight that they would not know for a day whether he will survive the fall. If he does, he will be the only parachutist who ever did.

He was piloted over the new Floyd Bennett Flying Field in an Eagle Rock plane by George Herman, the owner. At 2,700 feet he jumped, and to the horror of the crowd of 8,000 persons below, visitors to the various aviation fields on the island, the parachute failed to open at all until he had fallen 700 feet. There half of it unfurled and checked the terrific velocity of the fall somewhat.

Three Men Killed By Fumes of Still

Former Policeman One Victim of Asphyxiation in Newport House.

Newport, Ky., June 22 (A.P.).—Three persons, one of them a former Newport policeman, were asphyxiated today by fumes from a 500-gallon still in the home of August Remonowsky, 39, according to Coroner Walter B. Hughes. The dead: Remenowsky, Mrs. Matilda Remenowsky, 38, and Anthony Sendelback, 39, former policeman.

The bodies were found in the basement of the home by Anna May Remenowsky, 15, oldest of eight children in the family. All of the children were asleep on the first and second floors of the house, but were not affected by the fumes.

The girl discovered the bodies at 7:30 this morning. The coroner said the trio had been dead several hours. Sendelback was visiting at the home, the coroner said.

Birth of Son Said to Have Made Last of Dreams of American Hero Come True; "Little Anne" Also Wanted Boy.

New York, June 22 (A.P.).—The lone eaglet—son of the Lone Eagle and the daughter of America's Ambassador to Mexico—lay sleeping in his nest tonight, unaware of the acclaim that his birth today calls forth from the world.

And, if the way in which his parents conduct their lives and their relations to the public are an indication, the son of Col. Charles Lindbergh and the 24-year-old girl who is known to her friends as "Little Anne" will be reared in strict simplicity, designed to keep that knowledge from his ken.

"I don't believe he even has a crib yet," a close friend of the family said tonight. "None of us knows anything about the arrangements that have been made for him—his clothes, his carriage or anything. One thing you may be sure—he'll be as simply reared as any child in America."

From the Morrow home in Englewood, a servant spoke over the telephone to a New York newspaper, expressing some of the gladness within the household.

"They say he looks like his father!" he said.

Members of the family, however, preserved the same attitude of reticence that has surrounded affairs of the Lindberghs since the colonel's courtship of "Little Anne" in the flower filled garden of the Morrow estate at Cuernavaca, Mexico.

A few hours after the baby's birth, Ambassador Morrow and his daughter, Elizabeth, attended a reception tea at the home of a family friend in Englewood.

The birth of a son was said by a friend tonight to have made the last of the dreams of America's hero of the air come true. For weeks, it was said, Col. Lindbergh has been dreaming of a son, who could follow in the trails he has blazed through the air.

The mother of the eaglet, who, as a schoolgirl poetess in Smith College, wrote a sonnet to the lone eagle shortly after his flight to Paris, also wanted a son.

Since her marriage to the man who blazed a trail over the Atlantic to Paris, she has flown with him north and south, east and west. Col. Lindbergh taught her to fly. So confident was he in her ability as a pupil that he seated himself on a club veranda and read a newspaper while she made her first solo flight. And it is said the young mother hopes her illustrious husband some day will teach her son to fly.

ASSAULT IS CHARGED IN SHOOTING AFFRAY

Maryland Policeman Held in Alleged Fight Over Man's Wife.

FIVE BULLETS ARE FIRED

Charges of assault with intent to kill were booked against Earl Monrote, 40 years old, a town policeman of Riverdale, Md., at midnight by Ninth Precinct police for allegedly firing at W. H. Turner, 40 years old, a railroad brakeman, of 808 Fifth street northeast, in an altercation between them in front of the former's home on Maryland avenue, near Twelfth street northeast.

Turner, who escaped unhurt, was quoted by police as declaring that the affray ended a search he had made for Monrote in the belief that the man "was breaking up my home now just as he did five years ago."

Turner told police that he had a fist fight about two weeks ago with Monrote and warned the man to keep away from his wife, explaining to police that Monrote caused a temporary rift in his family five years ago. He said he followed his wife and Monrote to the Maryland avenue address, and that in a struggle Monrote shot at him five times with a pistol.

Ninth Precinct Policeman S. Schimkezy heard the shots and ran to the scene. He said he disarmed Monrote as the fifth shot was fired.

GAY BROKER'S THEFT HEARING IS DELAYED

MAY INVOLVE MILLIONS

New York, June 22 (A.P.).—Unshaven and haggard, Harold Russell Ryder, 37, until recently known as the "Young Wizard of Wall Street" and the "Millionaire Playboy of Broadway," appeared in Tombs Court today as a result of the $4,000,000 failure last Thursday of Woody & Co., brokerage firm in which he was a partner.

Immediately on his appearance his case was put over until Tuesday at the request of the district attorney's office, and he was continued in $10,000 bail on a charge of suspicion of grand larceny of $95,000 from a client of the brokerage house.

This charge, which alleges he failed to deliver securities for which he received the money, is the only specific accusation against him, but his partners, Charles L. Woody, jr., and Lucien A. Hold, as well as their wealthy relatives, friends and acquaintances, who formed the bulk of the clientele of the brokerage house, want Ryder questioned about the disappearance of more than $4,000,000.

Credited with having run a shoestring into $15,000,000 on Wall street, Ryder's bank account now stands at $615, investigators said. He gave $200,000 to a college and spent lavishly along Broadway, distributing $100 tips to waiters and "adopting" several chorus girls. Texas Guinan hailed him as "the greatest sucker of them all."

Apparently suffering from lack of sleep, Ryder listened quietly to the proceedings in court today.

Inquiry to Be Opened Today In Miami's Beauty Contest

Texas Bathing Girl Who Won Declared Married and Ineligible; District of Columbia Entry Said to Have Come From Wheeling, W. Va.

Miami, Fla., June 22 (A.P.).—Miami's bathing beauty contest troubles are expected to start on the way toward solution tomorrow, when officials of the Bathing Beauty Pageant Association open a two-fold, formal investigation into charges that prize winners of the contest held March 11 were illegally entered.

G. A. Trice, president of the association, declined tonight to comment on suit for $10,000 filed yesterday against the City of Miami by the Seaboard Air Line Railway Co. for railway fares for participants in the contest. The suit disclosed that several contest entrants did not travel from the States they represented.

R. B. Brossier, Orlando, Fla., publisher, said he would appear before pageant officials tomorrow with Miss Margaret Exdahl, of Tampa, who, as "Miss Florida," was awarded third prize in the contest.

Brossier said he would present affidavits at the meeting, to the effect that Miss Janet Eastman, representing Texas, was ineligible to enter the contest or to receive first prize as "Miss America" because she was married. He will present similar papers asserting that Miss Alberta McKellop, who carried off second prize, was not selected as "Miss California."

Trice said tonight he expected officials of the pageant association to take formal action on Brossier's claim that Miss Ekdahl should be designated Miss America because of alleged ineligibility of the other two girls.

Last night Trice said that at the time of the contest he was aware that some of the girls did not come from the States they represented.

The railroad company's suit alleges that $6,624.74 worth of railroad tickets were furnished the contestants under promise of Mayor C. H. Reeder of Miami, that the transportation company would be paid by the city. The promise, the suit alleged, was ratified by the city.

The suit then goes on to say that six of the entrants came from Shamokin, Pa., and that they represented the States of New Jersey, North Carolina, New York, Montana, Louisiana and Pennsylvania. The action also alleges that Miss California, second prize winner, came to Miami from McAllester, Okla.; Miss Missisaippi, from Wichita, Kans.; Miss Nevada, from Dallas, Tex.; Miss Vermont, from Bangor, Me., and Miss District of Columbia, from Wheeling, W. Va.

Mayor Reeder could not be reached for a statement.

TWO REBUFFS TO DATE

President Hoover, it was learned yesterday, expects administration leaders in Congress to make a fight for the additional $250,000 he has requested to complete the investigation now being made by the Wickersham commission into law enforcement conditions in the United States.

The House has eliminated the fund from the second deficiency bill, but a subcommittee of the Senate appropriations committee has approved $50,000 with a proviso restricting its use, as well as the commission's unexpended balance of $80,000, to an inquiry of enforcement activities under the Volstead act.

Thus where the President, at the instance of Chairman George W. Wickersham, sought $330,000 for the next fiscal year to continue its study of crime and law enforcement in all their aspects, the House denying even the continuance of the unexpended balance, has provided nothing, while the Senate committee concedes $120,000, providing the commission attends strictly to prohibition enforcement.

Expected to Use $330,000.

What the commission had proposed to do in the next fiscal year is set forth in its proposed budget sent to Congress with the President's request for the additional $250,000. In addition to general office expenses, commissioners' expenses, the commission expected to use the $330,000 in investigating as follows:

Prohibition, $65,000; cost of crime, $20,000; causes of crime, $6,000; police, $5,000; criminal justice and the foreign-born, $15,000; prosecution, $11,000; statistics, $6,000; lawlessness of Government officials, $20,000; courts, $50,000; probation, prison and parole, $10,000.

It is these activities that aroused the ire of Senator Glass, who told the Senate frequently that the commission was wasting its time collecting statistics "on juvenile delinquency and automobile accidents" instead of getting the fact on prohibition enforcement.

Dry Law Held First Aim.

It is true that Senator Glass, who put the investigation under way when he sought an appropriation for prohibition inquiry, accepted an amendment providing for an inquiry into the enforcement of other laws, but he and other interested senators insist that prohibition was the primary intention.

Administration senators have two courses to follow. They may attempt to put the $250,000 back in the deficiency bill in the full appropriations committee or on the Senate floor or by a separate joint resolution appropriating the amount.

The latter method has been suggested by the White House, but the closing hours of Congress make this method particularly open to successful attack by a few senators, including Mr. Glass, who want a prohibition inquiry or nothing.

Two Canonized In Vatican Rites

Caterina Thoma and Lulucia Filippini Proclaimed Saints by Pope.

Vatican City, June 22 (A.P.).—At an impressive ceremony at St. Peter's today two new names were added to the roster of saints of the Catholic Church. Many Americans were present. Pope Pius, in a Latin allocution, solemnly proclaimed the canonization of Caterina Thoma, a Spanish canoness, and Lulucia Filippini, Italian founder of a teaching order of nuns.

Bishop Thomas J. Walsh, of Newark, N. J., who has a large colony of Filippini Sisters teaching in his diocese, participated in a religious procession before the actual canonization. Twenty cardinals, three patriarchs, and fifty bishops and abbots took part in the procession.

Despite the heat of the day and the weight of his ecclesiastical vestments, his holiness appeared very vigorous. His voice, whether chanting or speaking, rang resonantly through St. Peter's. In the vast congregation, numbering more than 50,000, were descendants of the families of both saints.

Man and Wife Die In Blazing Plane

Pilot Makes Vain Effort to Rescue Passengers at Detroit.

Toledo, Ohio, June 22 (A.P.).—Mr. and Mrs. Joe V. Illeneuvre, of Detroit, weer burned to death here this afternoon when their airplane fell at the municipal airport and burst into flames.

The couple were burned to death before spectators could reach the scene. Kenneth Aber, of Mansfield, Ohio, their pilot, made a futile effort to drag them from the plane and he was burned in the attempt.

He told police he had been engaged to bring his passengers to Toledo from a Detroit airport and did not know their names. Identity was established through a letter found in the plane and through check of the plane number.

AMERICA REVEALED AS DEBTOR NATION

Balance Sheet in 1929 Bares Largest Private Debts in World History.

STILL LARGE CREDITOR

(Associated Press.)

America's balance sheet on international business of 1929 was issued yesterday by the Commerce Department.

It registered some of the largest totals ever set up to cover a year's transactions between the Nation and the world at large, and disclosed as well the remarkable shifting of trend by which this country, though remaining still the most important of money lenders, became also a borrower of tremendous sums of cash temporarily advanced by Europe.

Summing up all discoverable totals of international credits and debits arising from transactions of 1929, the official study found that the United States supplied goods, gold and services to foreigners having a value of $10,045,000,000, while foreign nations furnished Americans in like items a total of $10,054,000,000. Practically, every figure entering into the composite totals was larger than those set down in previous year's study of international economic relationships, with the exception of those attaching to American foreign investments. These dwindled to $696,000,000 in 1929 from the record of $1,484,000,000 set by them in 1928, for reasons attributed to American stock speculation last year.

Tourists Spent $839,000,000.

Foreigners were estimated to have purchased $1,537,000,000 worth of American stocks and bonds during 1929, invested considerably more in this country than Americans sent abroad. In addition, foreigners lending or investing capital in the United States during the year collected $414,000,000 in interest, as an offset to the total of $876,000,000 collected by Americans during the same period in interest and dividends from the great sums of investment abroad made during the previous years.

American tourists traveling in Europe, Canada, Mexico and other quarters of the globe, spent $839,000,000, which constituted a debit in the national account, which foreigners visiting here off-set only to the extent of $180,000,000.

Along with these figures the balance sheet included the credit of $5,241,000,000, which the United States gained by its record-breaking export of commodities in 1929, imports of goods being a debit of $4,400,000,000. A whole series of miscelaneous "invisible" exports and imports completed the account.

Private Debts at Peak.

"The private debts of United States citizens to foreigners, approximately $7,500,000,000, are now greater than at any time in American history. That means, of course, that on absolute amount we are now the greatest debtor nation (on private account) in the world's history, though on net balance we are one of the most important creditor nations. The increase of foreign funds in the United States during 1929 was apparently slightly above $400,000,000. One looks forward to the possibility of increases of the same order in the years to come. Foreign trading on American stock exchanges—purchases and sales—during the year totaled well over $4,000,000,000."

The decline in foreign investments of Americans during 1929 as compared with the performance of previous years, the Secretary remarked, was "in no doubt responsible in part for some of the fiscal and foreign exchange difficulties of certain foreign nations, for some of the worldwide recessions in business and for some of the reduction in our merchandizing exports during the latter part of the year and early in 1930. It may also have contributed to the world decline in commodity prices."

The rush of foreign funds to American borrowing markets in 1929, he added, served to increase American gold stocks by $307,000,000 in fifteen months, which metals "delivered in this country, after it had reduced the credit bases and purchasing power of the outside world apparently served no useful purpose."

Wrong Man Held As Queens Maniac

Girl Fails to Identify Jersey City Prisoner as Killer.

Jersey City, N. J., June 22 (A.P.).—A man who said he was William Ernest Cordray, 31, was arrested today by a policeman who believed he bore a resemblance to descriptions of the Queens maniac slayer, but later it was learned the policeman was wrong.

Miss Betty Ring, who was with Noel Sowley, one of the killer's two victims, when he was killed in Queens Borough, New York, came here to look at Cordray. She failed to identify him.

Cordray said he was a graduate of a Georgia University and that he came to New York in 1925 to study law. For some time, he continued, he had been living a hand to mouth existence. When found by a policeman sitting on a park bench, he was carrying a winter overcoat, "because he had no place to leave it."

Soviet Plans Recall Of Exiled Chief Rabbi

Moscow, June 22 (A.P.).—The correspondent of the Jewish Telegraphic Agency learned today that the Soviet government intends to recall Rabbi Lazarev, chief rabbi of Leningrad, from his exile in Narim, permitting him to reside anywhere in Soviet Russia except in Leningrad, Moscow and four other cities.

Rabbi Lazarev was arrested on February 26 by the Russian Secret Police on a charge of maintaining illegal connections with rabbinical organizations abroad. On April 3 he was sentenced to ten years exile in a concentration camp.

SHORT SELLING HELD AS TARIFF LAW RAID

Wood Sees Attempt to Slur Administration; Klein Praises New Bill.

VITAL CHANGE ASSURED

(Associated Press.)

A Democratic senator and a Republican representative yesterday viewed the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill, which President Hoover signed last Tuesday, from opposite positions. The former forecast retaliation; the latter progress and prosperity.

In a statement by Senator Thomas, Oklahoma, issued by the Democratic national committee, protests of foreign nations against applying the schedules in the law were regarded as "serious."

Representative Will R. Wood, of Indiana, chairman of the Republican congressional campaign committee, held that the strongest recommendation of the law's protective policy was to be found in the opposition of "Wall street gamblers," whom he charged with attempting to discredit the administration and the tariff law. He advocated a congressional investigation of the "dumping and short selling of stocks."

"The bill just passed, admitted by all at home to be bad, and condemned universally abroad," Senator Thomas said, "is the paramount issue of the people. The major issue is relief from the tariff."

The statement issued Thursday by Secretary Mellon, envisioning stabilization of business through certainty of industrial programs, contained, the senator declared, "a veiled threat to protesting nations."

"There is every reason to believe," Representative Wood said, "that recent manipulations in the New York stock market, which have cost scores of thousands of small investors hundreds of millions of dollars, have been of political inspiration, and intended to discredit the national administration and the new tariff law."

Authority granted to President Hoover and the United States Tariff Commission to change upward or downward rates proposed by the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill was said by Dr. Julius Klein, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, in a radio address last night, to constitute "a new and efficient instrument for public service." Dr. Klein said that the law would require the President to designate a new commission within 90 days, and predicted that the policy of the administration and the personnel of the new body would "revitalize the flexible provision and make it genuinely helpful to consumers as well as producers."

"There are a variety of reasons," he said, "why I believe we may reasonably hope that the new Tariff Commission will accomplish a great deal more in changing rates under this clause than was done under the old plan. There has been an entire revolution in powers. Instead of a very limited and circumscribed authority for the President, we have a rate-making commission of large powers. Second, the American people are now, for the first time, fully ripe for real use of a Tariff Commission."

Melville Davisson Post Is in Serious Condition

Chances of his recovery were considered doubtful.

MUSSOLINI ORGAN WARNS OF TARIFF

Editorial, Believed Dictator's, Says Italy Will Guard Against America.

TO BUY WHERE SELLING

Rome, June 22 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Popolo d'Italia, Mussolini's Milanese daily, today carries an unsigned leading editorial, obviously from the pen of Italy's dictator, on this country's reaction to the new American tariff.

After disclaiming any intention of backing France's plans for political reprisals the writer of the editorial says:

"If the United States raises an almost insurmountable tariff wall, it is logical, just and inevitable that Italy defend her own markets against American invasion.

"Let the leaders of American finance and politics take our just rights into account. Business is business, and no nation follows that maxim more closely than the United States, who measure everything in dollars.

"Italy will buy from those nations that buy her agricultural products, marbles, ships, silks, woolen and cotton goods and so forth. The right to live makes iron laws necessary in the tremendous struggle of international competition.

"Italy will get supplies solely from those states which buy from her. Wheat, meat, oil, coal and iron are products we can easily find elsewhere than in the United States. Our ships will only load foreign merchandise if they go forth laden with Italian merchandise.

"We must retrocede in the course of civilization, going back to exchange in natural things. But the fault is not ours. Since the Americans are practical people they will realize, sooner or later, that if they wish to sell they must also buy.

"If they want the war debts paid they must make commerce possible.

"Our struggle will be developed on these lines without drama or enmity. In other fields we can come to an understanding while waiting for better times. North America will appreciate Italy's feeling of justice and equanimity"

Mexican Debt Set At $474,477,000

Finance Secretary and Bankers to Meet in New York Wednesday.

Mexico City, June 22 (A.P.).—With conferences between Secretary of Finances Montes de Oca and the international committee of bankers on Mexico opening at New York on Wednesday, the department of finances today gave out a statement listing Mexico's indebtedness.

The country's total capital indebtedness and unpaid interest amounted to 946,958,898 pesos and 33 centavos (about $474,477,949). Of this sum, the capital indebtedness is 550,549,422 pesos and 25 centavos; the rest is interest.

This represents debts contracted up to 1914 and recognized by succeeding governments, plus the unpaid interest on those debts.

CHICAGO HUNTS FOUR IN KILLING OF LINGLE

24-Year-Old Gunman, Said to Have Fired Shot, One of Quartet Sought.

DEATH PISTOL IS TRACED

Chicago, June 22 (A.P.).—Every resource of the unified law enforcement agencies working on the Lingle murder case today was thrown into the intensive hunt for four fugitives in the belief that their arrest will solve the slaying of the Tribune reporter.

Chief among those sought was James "Red" Forsythe, who police said has been identified by witnesses as the man who shot Lingle to death in a Michigan avenue subway thirteen days ago and then raced to freedom across the traffic-jammed boulevard.

The others are Frank Foster, to whose ownership police claim to have traced the short-nosed revolver which the killer discarded as he fled; Simon J. Gorman and Frankie Noon, associates of Forsythe.

Forsythe Dangerous Gunman.

The search for Forsythe confirmed rumors that authorities laid the murder to the Moran-Aiello gang. Within an hour of the slaying Lieut. William Cusick and his squadron were dispatched to the organization's bailiwick by former Police Commissioner William Russell to corral all known gunmen.

Forsythe was one of the members of the Moran-Aiello gang taken last December in a raid on their loop headquarters and is recognized by officials as a dangerous gunman despite the fact he is but 24 years old.

Authorities did not accuse Gorman, Noon or Foster of active participation in the murder but insisted they could advance valuable information.

Raps Public Information.

Detectives, who traced the pistol, said Foster had purchased it from a northside hardware merchant a year ago. They believe he left the weapon behind when he deserted Moran and Aiello some time ago and the killer recovered it. Following the slaying, they agree, the assassin tossed the revolver aside to throw suspicion on Foster.

Charles F. Rathbun, Tribune counsel, who last week was appointed special prosecutor in the Lingle case was indignant because the identities of the suspects had become known through a "leak in the police department."

He declared the revelation of developments in the investigation, meant to be strictly secret, would hamper the actions of the investigators.

Fliers Break Own Mark In Endurance Attempt

Chicago, June 22 (A.P.).—Droning evenly over Sky Harbor Airport, the plane City of Chicago carried Pilots Kenneth and John Hunter past their own endurance mark today and zoomed on in an effort to break the record for continuous flight.

At 2:40 p. m. (C. D. T.) the Hunter brothers had exceeded by an hour their own mark of 261 hours, made last summer in the same plane. With the motor functioning well, the aviators were optimistic of their chances for adding to the log the 159 hours needed to shatter the 420-hour mark of the St. Louis Robin.

French Flier Sets Mark With Loaded Airplane

Paris, June 22 (A.P.).—Lieut. Paris, of the French navy, in a seaplane carrying one gross ton of useful cargo, today completed an endurance flight in which he remained aloft 24 hours 23 minutes 3 seconds.

He covered 2,853 kilometers (1,771.7 miles), setting what were claimed as new speed records for a seaplane with a thousand kilograms load and also the duration record for that load.

POLICE FAIL TO LINK MAN WITH MURDER

Leroy Woodson, Sentenced in Shooting Case Not Ashland Suspect.

WAITS PRISON TRANSFER

J. P. Melton, a special policeman from Ashland, Va., failed yesterday to identify Leroy Woodson as the man wanted for the slaying of Harry V. Sweeman, chief of police of Ashland, on June 29, 1929.

Woodson is being held in the Arlington County Jail awaiting transfer to the Virginia State Penitentiary at Richmond to serve a nine-year sentence after he confessed last week to shooting Policeman Raymond Crack, of Arlington County, during a rum chase last February.

The Ashland policeman was accompanied by W. K. Saunders, acting Mayor of Ashland, and Detective R. C. Lee, of Greensboro, N. C., retained by Sweeman's family as a special investigator.

Melton said that although Woodson bore some resemblance to Sweeman's slayer, he was not positive in his identification, and added that he will "await with interest" Woodson's transfer to Richmond.

TEXT OF PRESIDENT'S NOTE OPPOSING VETERANS' BILL

as amended by Senate committee will add directly $102,000,000 the first year, ultimately rising to the addition of a sum of $225,000,000 per annum. Even these estimates are far from including the whole of the potential obligations created by the principles embraced in this legislation and the uncertain added expense by certain amendments to previous legislation.

Means Increased Taxes.

Mr. Mellon states that the passage of this legislation implies positive increase of taxation at the next session of Congress.

It does not appear that these bills ever represent the real views of the various veterans' organiations. The American Legion, after careful study as to what they considered the needs of their fellow veterans, proposed legislation which would require an additional annual expenditure of $35,000,000 per annum. Thus these measures which are before Congress represent an implied increase in expenditure of from three to ten times what these veterans themselves consider would be just. The Veterans of Foreign Wars and other organizations have contended for measures differing entirely from those now proposed.

Gen. Hines has pointed out that this legislation goes far beyond immediate necessities and that of even more importance, it creates grave inequalities, injustices, and discriminations among veterans, resulting from the methods adopted or extended in these bills, and creates future dangers to both the public and the veterans. The very fact that the committees of Congres and the various veterans' associations have themselves been during the past six months of many minds upon these questions, indicates their extreme difficulty. There certainly comes from it all the conclusion that we should either have a sound plan now or should have more time for determination of national policy upon established principles in dealing with these questions for the future. We must arrive at such a basis as will discharge our manifest national obligation with equity among veterans and to the public.

Grave Needs Admitted.

I do not wish to be misunderstood. There are cases of veterans who are in need of help today, who are suffering, and to whom I earnestly wish to see generous treatment given. But these situations do not reach anything like the dimensions of these measures.

We have stretched Government expenditures in the budget beginning July 1 to the utmost limit of our possible receipts, and have even incurred a probable deficit principally for the relief of unemployment through expansion of public construction. Every additional dollar of expenditure means an additional dollar in taxes. This is no time to increase the tax burden of the country. I recognize that such considerations would carry but little weight with our people were the needs of our veterans the issue and were we dealing with sound measures, but, as Gen. Hines presents, there are conclusive reasons for opposing an unsound measure which is against the best interests of the veterans themselves and places an unjustified load upon the taxpayers at a time when every effort should be made to lighten it.

I do not believe that just criticism or opposition should arise to such suggestions upon full understanding of the situation, for I know that the great body of patriotic men who served in the World War themselves recognize that there are limits to expenditure and there are principles that should be adhered to if we are not to prejudice their interest both as veterans and citizens.

$100,000,000 DEFICIT SEEN, MELLON TELLS PRESIDENT

you my best judgment as to whether receipts for the fiscal year 1931 will be adequate to support this additional burden. I regret to say that they will not.

"You appreciate, of course, the very great difficulty of estimating revenue twelve months in advance, particularly when as under our system the government depends so largely on one form of tax, the income tax, which is directly susceptible to fluctuations in business conditions. An absolutely accurate estimate would presuppose our ability to forecast general business conditions over the period of the next twelve months, and this is obviously impossible."

Sees $100,000,000 Deficit.

"Based on estimates of expenditures furnished by the Director of the Budget and on this department's estimates of receipts, which I may add, are predicated on a not unhopeful attitude in respect of future business developments, the present indications are that the Government will close the fiscal year 1931 with a deficit of more than $100,000,000. If the reduced income tax rate is to be retained and made applicable to 1930 incomes, present estimates forecast a deficit of approximately $180,000,000. These figures are, of course, exclusive of any additional burdens to be imposed by new legislation.

"I think I should direct your attention to the fact that these figures are based on the assumption that interest payments to be made by foreign governments in accordance with existing debt settlement agreements will be paid in the United States Government securities, as they have almost universally been paid in the past, rather than in cash, thus constituting an automatic reduction of our national debt, but not making these payments available for current expenditures. Even when foreign interest payments have been made in cash, the Treasury up to the present time has been in a position to apply them to the reduction of our national debt. This policy has been so well established over the course of years, and is manifestly so sound that foreign repayments, both principal and interest, have come to be looked upon as definitely earmarked for the reduction of our war debt.

Rates Above 1928 Act.

"Moreover, whether these interest payments are to be made in securities or cash is dependent on conditions wholly without our control. We are not justified, therefore, in budgeting upon the assumption that they will be made in cash. But assuming that they are and assuming that our Government is willing to set aside its well-considered and established program of debt reduction; ever then I can not give you any assurance at the present time, and without taking into consideration new burdens, that we can retain the 1 per cent reduction and not incur the danger of a deficit.

"But if $100,000,000 or more is to be added to the expenditures already in sight, it is perfectly apparent that the 1928 income tax rates must be restored, and I should not be quite fair to the members of both houses and to the taxpayers of the United States if I did not point out at this time that this increased burden may necessitate even higher rates than provided for in the 1928 revenue act

Hopeful Against Rise.

"In the present state of business, accompanied as it must be by an inevitable reduction in the national income, the Treasury Department is vitally interested in not definitely closing the door to the possibility of retaining the reduced tax rates now in existence In spite of the figures above quoted, I am still hopeful that conditions may have shown such improvement by December as to justify my recommending to you and to the Congress a renewal of the action taken last December. The present estimates do not indicate that this is possible, but this does not mean that we should put ourselves in such a position as to preclude the possibility should events take a favorable course.

"In this connection, I think it is appropriate to remind you of what this 1 per cent reduction means to the income taxpayer, and particularly to the income taxpayer with a moderate income.

"If the 1 per cent reduction is not retained, approximately 2,095,000 taxpayers with net income of $10,000 or less will pay during the calendar year 1931 approximately $28,000,000 more than they would otherwise pay, thus losing the benefit of a 56 per cent reduction. If we take taxpayers with net incomes of $7,000 or less, they will lose the benefit of a 66 per cent reduction in taxes. It will be remembered that about two-thirds of the tax reduction benefit to individuals was accorded to taxpayers with net incomes of $25,000 or less.

Cites Planned Expenditures.

"In so far as corporations are concerned, if the rate is restored to 12 per cent they will lose the benefit of approximately a $90,000,000 reduction in their income taxes—at a time when the Government should endeavor to relieve rather than to increase the burdens on industry.

"In conclusion, I can answer your question by stating that legislation increasing the expenditures for 1931 by $100,000,000 and more over and above expenditures as now estimated by the budget director, will necessitate the restoration of rates applicable to 1931 income to the rates provided for in the revenue act of 1928, and it is probable that such increased expenditures may call for even higher taxes in order to maintain a balanced budget.

"In fairness to the country, I feel that the Congress should be informed that if expenditures are further increased now, taxes must be in December."

PRESIDENT WARNS AGAINST RELIEF BILL

SENATE TO VOTE TODAY

The bill passed some months ago by the House was estimated as costing $181,000,000 next year and $400,000,000 ultimately.

The President further contended the legislation went far beyond anything proposed by the various veterans' organizations. He said the American Legion had proposed a bill costing $5,000,000 annually, and "thus these measures represent an implied increase expenditure of from three to ten times what these veterans themselves would consider just."

Some Exceptional Cases.

"There are cases of veterans who are in need of help today who are suffering and to whom I earnestly wish to see generous treatment given," said the President, "but these situations do not reach anything like the dimensions of these measures.

"We have stretched government expenditures in the budget, beginning July 1, to the utmost limit of our possible receipts, and have even incurred a probable deficit, principally for the relief of unemployment through expansion of public construction. Every additional dollar of expenditure means an additional dollar in taxes. This is no time to increase the tax burden of the country. I recognize tha tsuch considerations would carry but little weight with our people, were the needs of our veterans the issue, and were we dealing with sound measures; but as Gen. Hines presents, there are conclusive reasons for opposing an unsound measure which is against the best interests of the veterans themselves and places an unjustified load upon the taxpayers at a time when every effort should be made to lighten it."

Asserting that the principles in both the House and Senate bills "depart absolutely" from the original conception of assisance to World War veterans, Gen. Hines said that "if we are to depart from the sound principles of payment of compensation for injury and disease resulting from war service, then it would appear to me that the real problem before us is whether the Nation is going to assume responsibility for disabilities among the four and a half million veterans which originate as ordinary incidents of life."

Held Unsound Medically.

Mr. Hines said one of the results of the legislation would be that men suffering with diseases not presumed to have been acquired in the service, if developed prior to January 1, 1925, would have such diseases presumed to have been acquired in the service if they developed prior to January 1, 1930, and other men suffering with diseases which have not heretofore been afforded the benefit of any presumption by law, would be presumed to have acquired their diseases in the service, if they arose prior to January 1, 1930. He estimated that this provision alone would probably affect approximately 100,000 veterans not now in receipt of compensation benefits for these disabilities.

The medical council of the Veterans Bureau, he added, has reported the inclusion of the diseases contemplated by this provision is unsound medically and "it can not be presumed that the diseases involved are the result of service during the World War.

"Therefore," the general said, "the theory upon which these benefits are extended is false."

Holding it has always been the policy of the Government to take care of veterans when they are overcome by permanent disabilities or age so they are unable to earn a support, Gen. Hines pointed out that the veterans of the World War average now about 38 years of age.

Must Make Distinction.

"If it is claimed that the time has been reached when it is necessary to give consideration to the matter of a pension for this group of veterans, along the same lines that we have cared for veterans of other wars, then the policy should be based upon the fundamental principles of pension legislation adapted to what the Nation can afford to do for the entire group of veterans who will eventually have to be cared for," Gen. Hines said. "most certainly we should distinguish clearly between those veterans whose injuries and disabilities were incurred in service and whose disabilities have been brought about by other causes after service.

"To approve a measure which will simply take care of 100,000 of these men unde. a presumption which we know is unsound, where their disabilities are not due to service, without extending to their comrades in the larger group the same measure of relief, is manifestly inequitable."

Another provision opposed by Gen. Hines would give a cash allowance to men in hospitals not suffering from a service-connected disability, and while they are in a hospital, to also pay an allowance to their families and dependents.

More Beds Needed.

Pointing out that hospital facilities of the Government are at this time inadequate to provide care for all veterans, and that there is at all times a waiting list of veterans, the general said "we are faced with the proposed policy of paying the veteran fortunate enough to secure a hospital bed an allowance for himself and his dependents," without providing for the men who fail to obtain a bed."

Elimination of the question of inequality, even to the point where the bureau's peak of hospital load is expected, the general said, would, according to current estimates, indicate an ultimate need of 39,400 additional beds, the cost of construction of which would approximate $137,900,000, with an annual maintenance cost of $59,100,000.

He added that "even with all these provisions, we would not have taken care of old age and many other fatalities that may happen to our World War veterans."

Four Russians Doomed To Die in Court Bribery

Samarkand, Uzbek, U. S. S. R., June 22 (A.P.).—Four men, including a former chief justice of the Uzbekistan Supreme Court, were sentenced to death today after conviction of favoring the Kulaks, or rich peasants, in court proceedings, accepting bribes, and participating in border raids.

They were: Alf Kasimov, the former chief justice; Ibragim Sharipov, former prosecutor for the supreme court; Ivan Spiridonov, former attorney for the defense, and a rich peasant named Alimoff. Three other defendants, including two judges, were sentenced to ten-year prison terms for the same offense. The trial lasted nearly four months.

DOWNPOUR ASSISTS INDIAN PARADE BAN

Rain and Police Keep Natives From Protest March Over Arrests.

CONGRESS IS OUTLAWED

Bombay, June 22 (A.P.).—Rain came to the assistance of the authorities today and prevented the holding of a procession planned by the Bombay provincial congress in sympathy with seventeen members of the Eighteenth Garhwal Rifles who were imprisoned for disobeying orders in a riot at Peshawar.

So continuous was the downpour that volunteers were sent out to beat drums and announce the procession would be held some other day. A small force of police was kept stationed, however, near the Congress House, where a crowd had collected. A company of the East Lancashire Regiment was kept ready for action at the nearest police station.

An extraordinary gazette issued by the Madras government declared the Andhra provincial congress committee an unlawful association within the meaning of the criminal law amendment act. Similarly in Guntur district, in West and East Kistna, in West Godavari and in the Town of Bezwada, the war councils have been declared unlawful because the government considers they interfere with maintenance of law and order, and constitute a danger to public peace.

Most Dhastic Step Yet Taken.

The action of the Madras government in declaring the Andhra provincial congress committee an unlawful organization is one of the most drastic steps yet taken by the authorities. Congressional leaders see in the move, together with the action of the Bombay magistrates in prohibiting drills and processions, indications of a general tightening up of regulations against Swarajists throughout the country.

Leaders said they believed that with Madras taking the initiative, similar action was likely to be taken in Bombay, Bengal and the Punjab. They interpreted the Madras action as giving the police authority to arrest the Madras Congress executive committee, consisting of 25 members.

Observers believed the rank and file of congress would not be affected, which, in turn, indicated that the struggle would be long drawn out. They explained that the congress probably would elect new executives to take the place of men arrested, following the same policy adopted for picketing shops and selling foreign goods. When these pickets are arrested, or when any other volunteers are locked up, their places quickly are taken by others.

Downpour and Police Block Move.

The Madras presidency consists of two districts, Andhra and Tamil. The latter district is unaffected by the new outlawing order.

The congress' plans for the Bombay parade today included use of large detachments of women to carry black flags in solemn silence. Thousands of boys on bicycles were to participate and men marching on foot were to carry slogans and banners. Thousands of Swarajists (members of the Independence party) jammed the streets for blocks when the downpour, coupled with the appearance of more and more police carrying bamboo sticks, caused the leaders to abandon their project.

Mexico's Nonstop Flier Honors Dead

Col. Fierro Lays Wreaths on Pioneers' Graves and Then Sees Ruler.

Mexico City, June 22 (A.P.).—Col. Roberto Fierro, having rested from his long grind at piloting his airplane in the first nonstop flight from New York to Mexico City, today went to Dolores Cemetery here to place wreaths on the graves of three fliers who died pioneering air trails.

After paying this tribute to Pablo Sidar, and his companion, Lieut. Carlos Rovirosa, killed in an attempted nonstop flight from here to Buenos Aires last May 11, and Capt. Emilio Carranza, killed while attempting the flight, Col. Fierro made yesterday, he called on President Ortiz Rubio at Chapultepec Castle. Reports say the president was greatly thrilled by Fierro's exploit.

The flier granted newspapermen a short interview, in which he said he was tired, and glad to get away from the roar of his plane's motor. Examination of the plane today showed only fifteen gallons of gasoline left—enough for about half an hour's flight, when Fierro landed.

Bishop S. C. Partridge Dies.

MILD OUTBREAK OF TYPHUS KILLS ONE, MAKES SEVEN ILL

teenth U. S. Engineers, where 150 or more of the Reserve Officers Training Corps from various universities now are in camp.

The death was that of Harry Gasson, 55 years old, an employe of the War Department, which occurred on May 25 at his home at Seminary Hill in Fairfax County, Va., on the outskirts of Alexandria. Although the case had been diagnosed by two Alexandria physicians and a prominent Washington specialist as typhus, and listed as the fever in vital statistics records in Alexandria, where the man was buried, the fact escaped public attention until physicians in the United States Public Health Service here yesterday confirmed the death as the first in the present so-called epidemic.

Gasson contracted the ailment about May 18 and immediately went to a sickbed in his home, where he was treated by both Dr. Llewelyn Powell and Dr. Hugh McGuire, both of Alexandria, who subsequently called in Dr. Sterling Ruffin, widely known Washington physician. The U. S. Public Health Service, in tests made from the man's blood at the Hygienic Laboratory, confirmed the malady as typhus. He was buried the next day.

The boy at Fort Humphreys is Clayton Shepherd, son of Theodore Shepherd, a civilian employe whose home is on the outskirts of the reservation, while the others are all in Maryland. Dr. Robert H. Riley, director of the Maryland State Department of Health, reported two cases in Kent County, and one each in Anne Arundel, Charles, Cecil and Howard Counties No names were made public

Dr. Riley characterized the appearance of the disease in Maryland as "a fairly general mild outbreak." Each of the cases there has been isolated and is under the closest scrutiny Physicians in Maryland have been requested to be on the lookout for typhus cases and to report any at once, in order that assistance may be given promptly by the State bacteriological laboratories and any other necessary facilities of the State Department of Health.

The Shepherd boy was taken suddenly ill about three weeks ago, having been seized with the customary typhus symptoms of a high fever, accompanied by headaches, chills, pains in the joints and skin eruptions. Dr William P. Caton, a physician at Lorton, Va., diagnosed the case as typhus and received a confirmation of this fact from the United States Public Health Service in making tests here Dr. Caton said the house immediately was quarantined and that every precaution was taken to prevent the infection of others, the Virginia State Health Department, the Fairfax County health authorities and medical authorities at the fort having been notified. He declared that the boy appeared to be on the road to recovery.

Col. Edward Schultz, commanding officer at Fort Humphreys, declared by telephone last night that the presence of the typhus case on the reservation had not been brought to his attention and that he intended to investigate the matter. Approximately 800 men are in the regiment there. The R. O. T. C. students now in training represent Virginia Military Institute, Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, the University of Maryland, Penn State University, Yale University, Harvard University and others.

In the absence of Dr. Hugh S. Cumming, surgeon general and head of the United States Public Health Service, who is in Detroit attending the American Medical Association convention, three leading physicians in the bureau announced that no cases had been reported in Washington. They are Dr. Taliaferro Clark, acting surgeon general; Dr. A. M. Stimson, and Dr. C. C. Pierce, both assistant surgeon generals.

The three expressed conviction that there was no fear of any epidemic.

While records were not available yesterday, belief prevailed among physicians that the death of Gasson was the first throughout this region due to typhus in many years. Scattered cases were reported in August, 1928, in Virginia, one of the cases being recorded in Alexandria. Baltimore had six typhus cases between October, 1919, and July, 1920, with rare cases since that time.

Typhus killed many in the United States prior to the Civil War. The disease took many lives in Europe during the World War and later, with approximately 20,000,000 Russians as typhus sufferers during 1920 and 1921, according to figures of the League of Nations. The scourge, trailing armies, was reported to have killed 80,000 Russians in a Siberian city in 1920.

Chinese Recruits Taken Off Steamer by British

Tientsin, China, June 22 (A.P.).—A platoon of British troops boarded the British ship Fausang today and removed a party of 150 Chinese army recruits who had boarded the steamer during the night and had refused to pay passage or evacuate the vessel.

The recruits, many of whom had been impressed into service, boarded the vessel under the escort of recruiting officers. Efforts of the ship's officers and police to persuade them to leave were unavaling and the troops were called. Considerable excitement was caused along the Bund, but the party was escorted across the boundary concessions without disorder.

DIAL FLASHES

By ROBERT D. HEINL

CODE which a Post reader recently complained had been marring WBAL, Baltimore, programs and invading the local program broadcast band is coming from the Naval Radio Station at Arlington, according to a complaint made by another Post reader yesterday.

"I live about 1½ miles from the Key Bridge, in Virginia, near Lyon Village. I began to notice code coming in all over the dial but particularly on WBAL, Baltimore," the latter declared, "when on this station it frequently brought WRC in with it. I have a high grade set, about eight months old. Nevertheless I thought it might be something in the set and then tried shortening my aerial.

"The expert called in said it was not the set and that many other listeners were having the same trouble. I then reported the matter to the Federal Radio Commission, which stalled along in the investigation, getting nowhere.

"A friend of mine—an amateur who can read code—happened to be at my house and picked up what he said was a maritime report put out by Arlington, and expressed the further opinion that it was being broadcast by an antiquated transmitter.

"I reported this to the Radio Commission, at which time the engineer to whom I talked said that because Arlington was a Government station, it could do about as it pleased, and there was no further action he could take, unless some of the higher-ups in the Radio Commission and the Navy interested themselves in the case."

SOME broadcaster seem to find it necessary to change their type of program for summer audiences, but the A. & P. Gypsies (WRC—tonight—7:30 one of the oldest features on the air, apparently retain their popularity with about the same kind of entertainment year in and year out.

This is, no doubt, due to the genius of their veteran conductor, Harry Horlick, who has been with the program as long as we can remember—a first-class orchestra and a sure-fire quartet.

WLW, Cincinnati, will dedicate its new studios with a program tomorrow from 7:30 o'clock until midnight.

SHALL a radio announcer of a prize fight be selected by the broadcasting company or by participants in the fight? Did the NBC favor Sharkey in the recent fiasco?

These are questions raised by Schmeling in his efforts to disqualify McNamee as the announcer in the next fight. We don't believe a fighter has any more right to tell a broadcasting company who to put in as an announcer than an actor would to tell a newspaper what critic to assign to a theatrical performance.

A broadcaster, be he Aylesworth, president of the NBC, or McNamee, wouldn't last 15 minutes with the radio audience, if he did other than give them an unbiased account of a prize fight or anything else broadcast.

The trouble, in our opinion, was that McNamee was, if anything, a little too honest in acquainting the radio audience with what a close shave Schmeling had from being defeated. It was this, we believe, which caused der Maxie to make the squawk.

Fans will be able to hear the conversation at the weighing in of Primo Carnera and George Godfrey (WMAL—1 p. m.) today, also a ringside description of the fight in Philadelphia (WMAL—9 p. m.).

Beginning Sunday afternoon, July 6, the 4 o'clock service from Washington Cathedral will be broadcast each week by Station WMAL, instead of WRC. Thereafter WRC will transmit a religious feature called "Twilight Reveries," the period conducted by Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, who is on vacation for the summer. On WMAL the service from Washington Cathedral will replace a Columbia sustaining feature known as the "Cathedral Hour."

In the future it will be WRC's policy to offer only national religious services, such as the Protestant, Jewish and Catholic hours, all originating in New York. The station will not resume broadcasting of the Sunday morning church services. WOL broadcasts a local church service at 11 o'clock each Sunday morning.

REFUSING to sell his church site and be chased out, and finding himself in the heart of the "radio city" which John D. Rockefeller, jr., expects to build in New York City, the Rev. Malcolm J. MacLeod, of the Collegiate Reformed Church, plans the construction of a skyscraper church.

This Dr. MacLeod declares, will compare favorably with the proposed Rockefeller group of four immense theaters, a symphony hall, the performances of all of which will be broadcast, and a 60-story executive building.

Another church which finds itself in the vicinity of the great amusement center is St. Patrick's Cathedral, just across Fifth avenue from the "radio city."

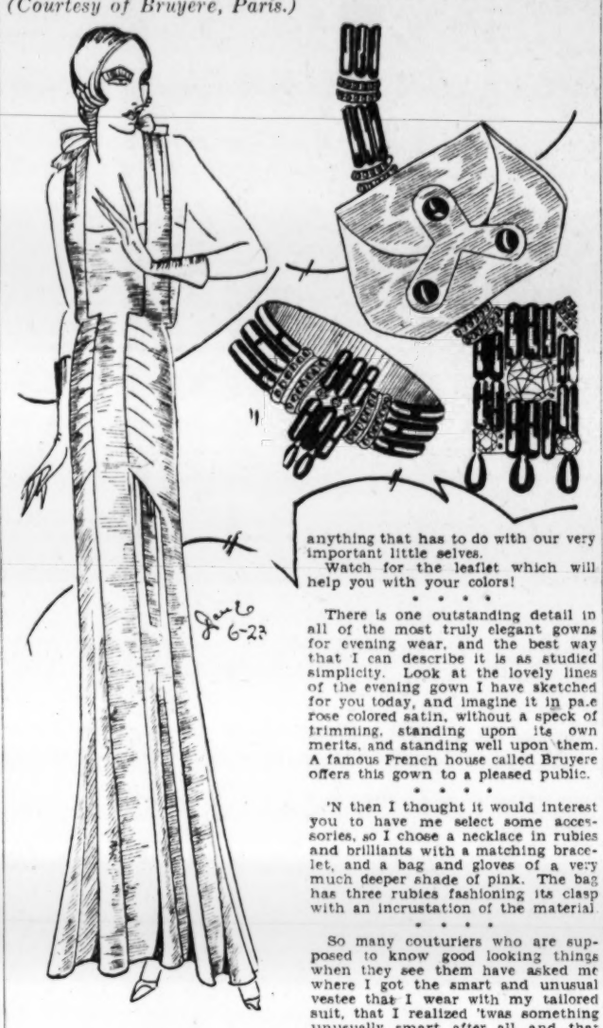
Jane Interprets the MODE

This pale pink satin evening gown has a most unusual neckline, and smoothly fitting hipline, due to clever tucking. (Courtesy of Bruyere, Paris.)



Paris, June 22.

ANYBODY can wear black and white. And black and white either alone or in combination are every bit as smart as they ever were, both for daytime wear and evening wear. But colors are ever so important. And opinions to the contrary, and not usually opinions they are either but just ideas based more or less on anything at all, every one can't wear every color.

A certain very few types of coloring can, if you insist, wear nearly any color—but there still remain the certain colors that do their very best for them, and other colors which, although wearable, are just simply utility things that mean nothing at all.

I haven't told you about colors for types for a long time, have I? Well, if you will just watch for it, you'll have a new leaflet on the subject very shortly. Meanwhile remember that generally speaking the colors best suited to the brunettes, and those that bring out the brunette's richness of personality and coloring are those found in the first half of the rainbow, and the colors best suited for blondes are those found in the last half.

There are exceptions to all rules just as there are exceptions in types, so certain shades of all colors can be found that are becoming to each individual. But what these shades are according to your personal coloring you must study a bit—because the day is past when we can afford to be haphazard and take chances with anything that has to do with our very important little selves.

Watch for the leaflet which will help you with your colors!

* * * *

There is one outstanding detail in all of the most truly elegant gowns for evening wear, and the best way that I can describe it is as studied simplicity. Look at the lovely lines of the evening gown I have sketched for you today, and imagine it in pale rose colored satin, without a speck of trimming, standing upon its own merits, and standing well upon them. A famous French house called Bruyere offers this gown to a pleased public.

* * * *

'N then I thought it would interest you to have me select some accessories, so I chose a necklace in rubies and brilliants with a matching bracelet, and a bag and gloves of a very much deeper shade of pink. The bag has three rubies fashioning its clasp with an incrustation of the material.

* * * *

So many couturiers who are supposed to know good looking things when they see them have asked me where I got the smart and unusual vestee that I wear with my tailored suit, that I realized 'twas something unusually smart after all and that you might like to make one for yourself. It's ever so easy to launder, too, and really simple to make with or without a sewing machine.

And in the same leaflet are the directions for making one more complete blouse, an ever so smart one with an unusual collar and delightful shirring that contours it. And oh-o-o o-o-o a skirt that makes a summer sports dress of this blouse!

Better not put off sending that stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post!

* * * *

And you better not forget the weekly Dare fashion letter in The Sunday Post each week.

Au revoir!

Daughter of Alfonso Marks 21st Birthday

Madrid, June 22 (A.P.).—Infanta Beatrice, daughter of King Alfonso, today celebrated her twenty-first birthday, beginning the day with attendance at mass in Royal Palace. She put in the collection box 22 gold coins, one more than her age.

Infante Don Jaime will be 22 tomorrow. He will leave for Malaga June 27 to embark for Ceuta, where a festival is being organized in his honor. The Prince of Asturias, heir apparent to the crown, will return to Madrid from Seville tomorrow.

The Goofus Ostrich

"Why can't you be on time?" I asked,
"I've waited for the hour past!"
The Goofus Ostrich smiled at me;
"I did a silly thing," said she.
"I swallowed an alarm clock which was set
On standard time—it's running yet;
The thing has really got me raving—
I can't reset it for daylight saving,
And so I guess it is my fate
To always be one hour late!"

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

SMALL-FLOWERED CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

JUST now there is a tendency among the average gardeners to grow less large-flowered and more of the pompon and single types of chrysanthemums. There is a practical reason for this.

First, the large-flowering varieties require more attention and skill than the amateur grower can give them, and second, large blooms are out of all proportion in the ordinary-sized room.

Sprays of the smaller blossoms are always desirable. So many new varieties of pompon and single chrysanthemums are introduced each year that it is hard for the professional grower to keep up to date and to the amateur the list is rather bewildering. These hardy, small-flowered kinds can be grown in the open without the protection of a cold frame, so they are practical for even the littlest garden.

The following varieties are all hardy and desirable for the amateur:

Pink varieties—Mrs. H. Harrison, Lillian Doty, Savina, Eden and Mrs. W. E. Buckingham.

Bronze varieties—Iva, Richard, Delafield, Miramar, Ouary and Bronze Buckingham.

White varieties—Uvalda, Bright Eyes, White Midget, White Doty and Snowflake.

Yellow varieties—Cranfordia, Golden Mensa, Chrysolora and Vivian Cook.

Among the true pompon types are yellow, Connie Dick; Bronze, Helena Flint; white, Mrs. Francis Bergen and pink, Rhoda.

Since hardy chrysanthemums prolong your garden at least four weeks in the fall their cause needs little boosting, and aside from their usefulness they require very little care. Another thing in their favor is the fact that to have perfect flowers you do not have to have large nor old plants. In fact, from young plants in 3-inch pots you should have a wealth of blossoms the first fall.

One thing every one growing chrysanthemums must learn is, that they require to be constantly pinched back. Do not, however, attempt to pinch them back after the first of September. Should the terminal ends of the shoots become covered with insects, spray with nicotine solution or dust some powdered tobacco over the plants immediately after sprinkling them.

It is also well to feed the plants some bonemeal or give them a little liquid manure at least three times during the first of the season. Do not give much stimulation after the first of September. It will repay you to keep chrysanthemums well watered during prolonged dry spells.

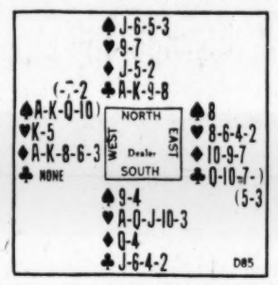
All readers' questions on growing and care of indoor and outdoor flowers and floral decorations for social functions will be answered by Miss Kift, directly in this column if addressed in care of The Washington Post, or directly to readers if a self-addressed, stamped envelope is supplied.

WORK ON BRIDGE

MISPLAYED HANDS I HAVE MET.



The above hand was played in a Duplicate Contract Bridge Tournament held in Philadelphia in May. At all the tables South bid one Heart, which West overcalled with four Spades so as far as the bidding was concerned there seemed to be no difference of opinion among the players, but in the play divergent ideas were followed and the scores made were widely different. At many tables North answered his partner's bid by leading the Nine of Hearts. South won with the Ace and returned the suit, hoping that North could ruff; but as North had a second Heart, West's King won and of course after that it was A-B-C playing for the Declarer to take five Spade tricks and four Diamonds, thus making his contract, although he had the hard luck to lose a trump trick in spite of his six trumps headed by Ace-King-Queen. At these tables the hand seemed to be a pianola; but was it?

THE CORRECT PLAY.

While as a general rule partner's suit is the best original lead of a hand, that may not be the case when holding a head sequence such as Ace-King-Queen, Ace-King-Jack, or even Ace-King. North should have led the King of Clubs, expecting that it would win and that he then would shift to his partner's Hearts, thus giving his partner valuable information. Of course, the Norths who made this lead were greatly disappointed when West ruffed the first Club, but in spite of the early ruff the Club lead proved to be a game-saver. At each of the tables that played the hand in that way the Declarer took only nine tricks because in every case he led three trumps and then established his Diamonds. North, winning the third Diamond, led his good trump and then another Club; so Declarer was obliged to lead from his King and one small Heart, not making either, and consequently lost one Spade, two Hearts and one Diamond.

What Today Means to You

By MARY BLAKE

"CANCER."

IF June 23 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 7 a. m. to 8:30 a. m., from 2 p. m. to 3:30 p. m., and from 8 p. m. to 9:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 5 a. m. to 6:30 a. m., and from 5 p. m. to 6:30 p. m.

Very forceful astrological influences on this date will stimulate your energies, bring forth your initiative, and make for impulsive actions and hasty words. Opportunities will be courageously grasped, and obstacles thrust ruthlessly aside.

The child born on this June 23 will captivate the world at an early age through its winsome and charming ways. It will be pleasure loving and have extravagant tastes. It will strive to rise above mediocrity.

You are decidedly a person of the moment; sufficient unto the hour might almost be your scheme of living. To you there is but one tense—the present. Your todays are no definite links between your yesterdays and tomorrows. You try to handle each day's program without reflecting upon the past, or projecting your mind into the future, and it is needless to say that this cannot always be done with safety. If you studied the perfect balance between "cause and effect," you would understand the whys and wherefores of most of your troubles.

You seem to be laboring under the misapprehension that the world is "on the job" for you without your individual effort or supervision. You do not realize that each and everyone of us must be captains of our own ships to a greater or lesser degree. You, and you only, must take the big responsibility of your life, and must watch out that you are not cheated or robbed of your just returns. You will not always have someone to speak up for you.

If you be a woman, you are almost childishly irresponsible and innocent. You dislike "figures," and have little money sense. You are, however, far more fascinating than many of your more practical sisters. You are very lovable, very generous, very kind, and sunny dispositioned.

Successful people born June 23:
1. Felix O. C. Darley, artist.
2. Clarence Eddy, organist.
3. The Prince of Wales.
4. Irvin Cobb, author.
5. Dr. Charles Gilmore Kerley, child's specialist.

Wives of Tomorrow

"IN RELIGION'S NAME."

DEAR MISS McDONALD: I am a young mother sick of begging for every cent I get. Do you think $100 a month to run the table, buy clothes for myself and two kiddies besides shirts, socks, underwear for him is too much money to get?

I do everything I can to keep peace in the family but it seems I am always wrong, we are of different religion, but I gave mine up just to keep peace. I don't go to his church and neither does he but I let the little girl go to Sunday school just to please him although it was hard on me as I wished her to be brought up a Catholic. But he would not even let either of them be christened in any religion. He consented to be married my way but soon let me know he was sorry afterward. Every argument he brings that up, too. I told him I could stand it no longer and he told me to leave but not to dare take the children. I have no parents so don't know what to do, or where to go. I would gladly leave him if I had some way of supporting the children myself. But I would need money to see us through until I could find some work to do. When I think it over I hate to leave as I worked for years after we were married to help pay for our furniture and home and why should he have the benefit? I hate him so much that if it weren't for the kiddies I'd walk out tomorrow and never care to see him again. What do people do who can't get along and can't settle things themselves? Please, Miss McDonald, answer my letter as soon as you can and let me know if you think I am at fault. I'll do anything I can to live in peace. I am losing weight from worrying. I'll be a wreck if things don't straighten out soon. Please just print my initials when you answer. A. D.

It is an actual fact, proven every day, that the individuals who yell the most loudly about religion and their particular little private brand of religion, have at heart the least religious sense. In most cases they are persons who can claim nothing else, and so loudly proclaim this one thing they can label theirs.

Your husband is a perfect type. He denies his children the beautiful rite of baptism, yet howls of his precious religion. It looks as if your children might at maturity have some real religion in their hearts, after a lifelong experience of watching a couple of cheerful bigots warring over the gentle Christ.

Dear woman, try to get hate out of your heart. Try to see this man as just a victim of ignorance. Bear with him in simple dignity. Your life away from him, torn up by the roots, would be no more tranquil than you can make it now if you choose to do so.

After all, there is little glory in being able to hold your own in a family war. The most earnest of these performances hardly justify the nerve wreckage they represent. And when our few hours on earth are over, our warring hearts at rest, our nice little private religions, and our nice little petty grudges laid aside, what does it matter whether we had the last word on the matter or whose religion was which?

Life is a big thing, or a very trivial, mean, little thing, just according to whether we lived it out, grew and were people, or whether we just ate, fought, died and decayed like maggots on a cabbage head. For your children's sake, stop fighting and live.

LAGUARDIA DEPLORES WAGNER BILL CUTS

Employment Measure Should Pass in Original Form, He Declares.

SAYS VIGOR TAKEN OUT

In a minority report to be filed with the House today Representative LaGuardia (Republican), New York, vigorously criticises the judiciary committee, of which he is a member, for having emasculated the Wagner bill providing for advance planning and regulation of public works to prevent unemployment and urges that the measure be passed in its original form.

"The committee amendments take the life and vigor out of the bill," says Mr. LaGuardia. "The amendments cripple and destroy the purpose of the bill. The measure as passed by the Senate eis a well-thought-out and balanced plan creating the machinery and providing the means for advanced planning of public works. The bill as amended by the judiciary committee leaves intact the machinery created by the Senate measure, but takes from it the fuel and lubrication. With the Senate bill, the machinery could function at full speed in periods of depression and unemployment, while under the judiciary committee amendments at such times it could only have the desire to function.

"It is insufficient to provide for an employment stabilization board and to give the President authority to submit supplemental estimates as he may deem advisable for emergency appropriations to be expended during such periods upon public works in order to prevent nuemployment, if such public works are not planned in advance and in the blue print stage. It will be no actual practical relief to appropriate public funds if the money can not be promptly expended in the actual employment of labor and the purchase of material for public works."

Mr. LaGuardia objects strenuously to the elimination of sections 10 and 11 of the Senate bill. Section 10 is known as the advance planning provision, while section 11 specifically covers public works.

"There can be no reason for failure of Congress to act on the Wagner national employment bills. While I admit that these bills in and of themselves can not solve the problem, they are the necessary steps to an effective and constructive solution of our unemployment problem. There is nothing before Congress of greater importance.

"National legislators must have vision to see ahead. One who does not must contemplate with horror what will happen if we fail to provide by uniform labor laws a shorter working day and a five-day week, and legislation for unemployment, child labor and old-age pensions."

JUAREZ MOB SHOUTS AGAINST AMERICAN

Meer's attorney, but were stopped by police.

Meers, an El Paso youth, claimed he shot Visconte in the belief he was Manuel Villareal, who shot Meers' father in an attempted holdup in El Paso five years ago.

Juarez officers were ordered to prevent a destructive demonstration at any cost. Only through the efforts of Roque Romero, a union leader, was a clash averted. He pleaded with the mob not to allow their emotions to get the better of judgment.

Juarez streets teemed today with Americans who resented the anti-American demonstration.

Meers was held on a charge of first degree murder, which upon conviction would carry a maximum sentence of 20 years to life imprisonment. Talk of effecting his release aroused union members in Juarez to protest.

'AMERICAN REDS PLOT NEW MOVES, REPORT

At Chicago, the monarchists further report, a secret Communist meeting has been planned for July 3, to organize a movement in which South American Communists also will participate.

The alleged movement includes the appointment of about 40 "instructors" to spread the "Red gospel" throughout the United States. To carry it into effect, several American Communists were said to have received orders from Moscow to return immediately to the United States.

The Monarchists assert that the following American Communists met Moscow agents at Danzig: William Hood, of Philadelphia; George Holbrook, Boston; Harold Talbot, of Baltimore, and a man named Ruegert, of Chicago. William Fowler, Harry Upton and a certain Wieghardt, all of New York, were said to have come from Moscow to Danzig by airplane.

It is understood that Hood and Holbrook left Danzig on Thursday for Marseilles, France, where they will embark for the United States.

The emigres also alleged that other secret meetings between American Communists and emisaries of the Internationale were held at Hamburg. They say that the latter will attempt personally to attend the Chicago meeting in July.

Chicago, June 22 (A.P.).—Police said tonight they have been aware for two months that a Communist convention is scheduled here for July 4 and 5, as reported in a dispatch from Berlin, Germany. Delegates have already begun to arrive, Lieut. Michael Mills, of the industrial squad, said.

Mills said also that his sources of information indicate that the Communists expect about 3,000 delegates. He added that he had received reports that the delegates would wind up their session with a march on Washington, to present their demands to President Herbert Hoover. Mills said he knew of the secret meeting in the Free City of Danzig, and knew who went there from Chicago. The local delegates will be questioned when they return, he added.

Mexico Executes Four In Killing of American

Nogales, Sonora, Mexico, June 22 (A.P.).—Gov. Francisco S. Elias of Sonora, Mexico, who arrived here last night from Cananea, Sonora, announced four men involved in the fatal shooting June 2 of Charles Koehler, American mining engineer, near Cananea, were court-martialed and executed near there Friday. Their names were not disclosed.

Koehler was shot to death when caught between gunfire being exchanged by rival labor groups.

BYRD TRIUMPHANTLY WELCOMED IN VIRGINIA

EXPLORER GIVEN BOWL

evening, he, with members of his family, his mother, Mrs. Eleanor Bolling Byrd, and his brothers, Harry and Tom, went direct to the residence of his mother, where a family luncheon was served.

He later slipped away from the crowds and went with a small party to the grave of his father, Richard Evelyn Byrd, sr., in Mount Hebron Cemetery, where he spent some time and laid a wreath of roses on the grave.

The brilliant lawyer father of the admiral died not long after the son's first attempt to reach the North Pole and before he became a world figure in aerial exploration.

With the Handley High School Cadet Band leading the procession of motor cars bearing members of the Byrd family, the party reached the Handley High School Stadium shortly after 4 o'clock, and thunderous applause went up from the thousands who had for an hour braved a blazing sun to catch a glimpse of the explorer. The service opened with a hymn, "Onward, Christian Soldiers," lead by the band, and then an introductory address by the Rev. Dr. F. T. McFaden, pastor of Loudoun Street Presbyterian Church, in which the minister voiced the admiration of local people for "Dick" Byrd and praised him for his loyalty to his home town.

Loyal to City.

The invocation was given by the Rev. Robert B. Nelson, rector of Christ Episcopal Church of which Admiral Byrd is a member. A selection of Scripture was read by the Rev. E. T. Clark, pastor of First Baptist Church and president of the Winchester Ministerial Association.

The address of welcome was delivered by R. Gray Williams, Winchester lawyer and banker, who, like Dr. McFaden, emphasized the loyalty shown by Admiral Byrd for all things pertaining to his home town in spite of the acclaim and honors showered upon him by home and foreign governments and societies.

Admiral Byrd expressed appreciation of the many evidences of affection and friendship shown by the people among whom he was born and reared, and declared that he was glad to meet so many people he knew well enough to call by their first name or the "nicknames" he knew them by when he romped and played with them as a child 35 years ago.

Bowl Given Explorer.

His voice became broken and husky when Mayor Shryock then presented him the city's gift. "The Star-Spangled Banner" by the band and the benediction by the Rev. Dr. McFaden closed the service. As Admiral Byrd and his party returned to their cars, hundreds swarmed around his automobile cheering enthusiastically. A few got to shake hands with him.

The silver bowl, 7 inches high and 15 inches across the top to the tips of the handles, had engraved on the front the coat of arms of the Byrd family of Virginia, under which was this inscription: "To Rear Admiral Richard Evelyn Byrd, whose loyalty to his native city has not been dimmed by world fame, and whose virtues are equal to his achievements." On the reverse side were the coat of arms of the city of Winchester and the inscription, "Presented by the City Council, Winchester, Va., 1930."

Returns to Mother's Home.

Returning to the home of his mother, after the thanksgiving service, Admiral Byrd joined a dinner party, at which he met many old friends who were boyhood playmates and exchanged reminiscences of other days. He told inquirers that he had no aerial exploration plans for the immediate future, reiterating that many business matters relative to the Antarctic exploit remained to be cleared up, and then, too, he had a rather voluminous report to prepare concerning the expedition.

He again voiced his satisfaction that every man who shipped out with the party nearly two years ago had returned safely, and that "not a man was left on the ice." Every one who talked with the explorer was impressed with his devotion to the members of his South Pole party.

Admiral and Mrs. Byrd and his mother and other relatives spent the evening with his brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Harry F. Byrd, at their country home near Berryville, where the Boy Scouts of Clark County called to pay their respects. The admiral and Mrs. Byrd and his mother and former Gov. Harry Byrd left Berryville about midnight for New York, and thence to Albany, where the admiral is to be presented with a medal by the State of New York.

Wife Raids Poker Fans; Man's Leap Breaks Hip

New York, June 22 (A.P.).—An enraged Bronx housewife, tired of waiting all night for her poker-playing husband to come home, knocked on the door of a Bronx apartment today, interrupting a quiet seven-handed game.

"Where is my husband?" she demanded in a loud and terrible voice.

Two of the players grabbed their hats and dived out a window. One of them, David Tarvin, 37, fractured his hip when he hit the sidewalk. At a hospital he was told his leap was needless. It wasn't his wife.

Prison Proposals To Be Made Today

Suggestions for Site of New U. S. Penitentiary Will Be Opened.

(Associated Press.)

The Government will take the first step toward carrying out its $7,000,000 prison expansion program today, when proposals submitting sites for a new Federal penitentiary in the Northeast section of the country will be opened in the Prison Bureau of the Department of Justice.

The site, which will be in either northeast Pennsylvania or southeast New York, will comprise 1,000 acres and the contracts for construction of the $3,821,000 prison are expected to be awarded within another month. Sanford Bates, superintendent of Federal prisons, expects that the new institution will be completed and ready for occupancy a year from next October.

The prison will be located within a circle, the center of which is near Erie, Pa., and which touches New York City on the East and Detroit on the West. This locality was decided upon, Mr. Bates said, because it was the center of prison population in the East, which has never had a Federal penitentiary.

Two Men Meet Death In Fall of Airplane

Tamaqua, Pa., June 22 (A. P.).—Gwilym Arthur, 24, Lansford, and Joseph Fisher, 26, Mauchchunk, were killed today in an airplane crash at the Hometown Airport near here.

The plane fell as they were taking off for the return trip to the Lehighton Airport, where they were believed to have been employed.

HEMORRHAGE FATAL TO HOWARD GREENE

Motion Picture Expert and Sportsman Dies After Brief Illness.

WROTE SCIENCE PAPERS

Howard Greene, scientist, inventor, and sportsman, died yesterday in Washington of cerebral hemorrhage after an illness of only a few hours. Mr. Greene was technical research engineer at the office of Motion Pictures, U. S. Department of Agriculture. He was 55 years old when he died, and lived at 1519 Thirty-first street northwest.

Though he was born in Canada, he has lived in Washington since 1923, being connected with the motion picture laboratory all that time. He was the inventor of "time lapse" machine, used in photographing the germination of seeds, and the growth of plant diseases. He was also an enthusaist in the matter of canoe sailing, having written for Yachting. Technical papers bearing his name were contributed to the Scientific American, Popular Science, and Popular Mechanics.

He is survived by two sons, Lewis and Kingsley, both of New York, and two sisters. No funeral arrangements have been made.

MRS. BARTHOLOMEW DIES.

Funeral Services to Be Held From Residence This Afternoon.

Mrs. Anna Sauls Bartholomew, 47 years old, wife of Henry A. Bartholomew, president of the Continental Life Insurance Co., of this city, died yesterday morning at her residence, 1813 Sixteenth street northwest, after a short illness.

Mrs. Bartholomew was born December 11, 1882, at Goldsboro, N. C., but she and her husband had lived in Washington since 1914. She is survived by one daughter, Miss Elizabeth Bartholomew, and one sister, Mrs. J. D. Easton, both of Washington. Funeral services will be held this afternoon from the residence at 4 o'clock.

Mussolini's Son-in-Law to China.

Rome, June 22 (A.P.).—Diplomatic and consular changes announced today include the transfer of Galeazzo Ciano, son-in-law of Premier Mussolini, from secretary in the Italian Embassy at the Holy See to Shanghai, where he will be consul general.

Ciano recently married Edda Mussolini and rumors were that he would be transferred to Washington as undersecretary at the Italian Embassy.

IN THE PLAYHOUSE

By JOHN J. DALY

FROM London town comes word that the Lord Chamberlain has refused to grant a license for the production of Marc Connelly's play, "The Green Pastures."

Thus, what one country thinks worthy of its highest theatrical prize will not be permitted on the stage of another. However, Londoners are going to the book stalls and are buying copies of the work; which doesn't make Mr. Connelly mad at all, at all.

The reason behind the refusal is that many believe "The Green Pastures" blasphemous. The theme of the play was gathered from Roark Bradford's book, "Ol' Man Adam an' His Chillun." Though the Deity is presented on the stage, various ecclesiastical authorities approved of the work; that is, in America. They were shown the manuscript before the play was produced.

"TRUE TO FORM" is the latest play from the pen of George M. Cohan, who is about to abandon Broadway for the summer. For some time now, the old musical comedy star of other days has been having quite a time of it prancing around in his own comedy, "The Song and Dance Man," a revival he staged shortly after leaving here in "Gambling." Also he put on "The Tavern," but when he comes back to the theater, in September, he'll serve only as an author directing his own play —"True to Form."

* * * *

IT WAS early in August of last year that Papa Belasco turned loose his comedy, "It's a Wise Child," on the denizens of Forty-fourth street. Now that opus is folding up. After the cast has had a week's rest, the play will take to the road—sometime about the first of July—and will hit direct for the Coast. There is some talk of Washington seeing it, probably about November or December.

* * * *

WHEN Saturday night came, and the last audience of the season filed out of the National, there were many queries. "Why did the National Theater Players have to stop, just when they were going good? Isn't it strange nobody goes to the good plays—only to the bad?" And a lot of other questions like that. The answers, of course, are very interesting to many, many persons—the actors, the stage hands, the electricians, the musicians, the advance agents, the publicity men, the box office boys, the bill couriers, the ushers, the charwomen, and all that vast horde of people who are employed in and about the theater, an institution of many complexions—and complexes.

* * * *

A NEW revue being made ready for Broadway will use no scenery. It is called "Tattle Tales." What the stage hands think of this innovation is nobody's business. Pretty soon somebody will plan to put on a musical comedy without music, thus taking a jab at the musicians

GAYETY

Jerrie McCauley's beauty and form, the singing voice of Joe Lang, with Virginia Wright and Elsie Davis prove the successful combination in this week's final edition of "Record Breakers." It will bring to a close the Gayety's successful season for Jimmy Lake and the Mutual Burlesque Circuit.

Jerrie McCauley and that newcomer, Joe Lang, put over entertainment yesterday that will long linger in the minds of those present. Jerrie, with her clever dancing and her musical number, "My Man," stopped the show. Lang possesses the best male voice here this season. He brought the show to a complete stop with his song numbers. Virginia Wright and Elsie Davis, two lassies who dominated the chorus during the season, got their chance in a specialty, and took advantage of it in numerous encores awarded their "vaudeville" specialty. Bobby Missen, Costello and Syde Burke stood out, with the chorus just as lively as ever. Dot Birdwell, a newcomer, showed plenty of talent in her specialty. After Saturday night the Gayety will come to a close until early in August, when the Mutual Burlesque will again entertain.

4-H CAMP TO HEAR OHIO COURT JUSTICE

Delegates Visit Arlington and Listen to Talk by R. W. Dunlap.

PARLEY PLANNED TODAY

An address by Judge Florence E. Allen, of the Ohio Supreme Court, will be the feature of today for the 150 or more boys and girls in Washington for the fourth annual 4-H Club encampment on the Department of Agriculture grounds near Fourteenth street.

The address will be delivered in the auditorium of the new National Museum at 9 o'clock. From 9:45 a. m. until 11:15 there will be a conference of club members in the auditorium, followed by a State leaders' conference in room 202 at the new Agricultural Building.

During the noon hour the boys and girls will inspect the natural history building of the Smithsonian Institution, and leaders' committees will hold their customary meetings in the afternoon.

Yesterday was a day of relative quiet for the campers, the only activities on their program being a tour of Arlington National Cemetery and the experimental farm of the Department of Agriculture at Arlington, where they listened to an address by Renick W. Dunlap, Assistant Secretary of Arriculture, who related the history of Arlington. Another speaker was Maj. J. Huntington Hills, U. S. A., who discussed the Army in peace time. During the morning most of the boys and girls went to church.

Death Is Blamed On Poison Liquor

Two Others Are Carried to Hospital Unconscious From Bad Rum.

Poison liquor proved fatal to a colored man and sent two unidentified white men to Gallinger Hospital in an unconscious conditoin last night in the Southwest section.

Thomas White, colored, 30 years old, dropped dead a few moments after walking into his home at 484 Locust street southwest early last night. He was pronounced dead by Dr. H. G. Hadley and an Emergency Hospital ambulance attendant. Fourth Precinct police ascribed death to the poison liquor.

About the same time police found a man lying unconscious in the gutter at Union and N streets southwest and another lying on the sidewalk at Second and F streets southwest. Both were removed to Gallinger Hospital, where their condition was reported later as fair. There were no marks or effects to identify them.

Britten Raps Backers Of Kearny Naval Site

(Associated Press.)

Advocates of the Camp Kearney site in the San Diego area for the Navy's proposed $5,000,000 Pacific Coast dirigible base as opposed to the Sunnyvale site on San Francisco Bay were charged by Chairman Britten of the House naval affairs committee yesterday with "dog-in-the-manger tactics."

The committee voted recently to defer any action on the Swing and Free bills, which, respectively, would authorize acceptance of a site at Camp Kearny and Sunnyvale, until the December session. Members urged at that time that the selection be postponed to enable a careful study of the voluminous testimony taken in the extended hearings.

Washington Home Project Indorsed

Bicentennial Group Backs Plan to Purchase Ferry Farm in Virginia.

Special to The Washington Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., June 22.—Announcement has just been made of the official indorsement by the executive committee of the National George Washington Bicentennial Commmission of the movement to purchase the George Washington boyhod home in Stafford County, near this city. The effort to secure the funds necessary for the purchase and preservation of historic land, known as the Ferry Farm, has been started by the George Washington Foundation, which made known recently that $60,000 toward the total sum has already been raised by subscription and private contributions.

The Washington family came from Wakefield to live on the farm across the Rappahannock River from Fredericksburg in 1738, when George Washington was a lad of 6. There his father and two of his sisters died. Mary Washington and the five remaining children continued to make it their home.

It was on the old Ferry Farm, as legend goes, that young George chopped down his father's cherry tree, caused the death of the unruly colt, and tossed the silver dollar across the Rappahannock. The property is steeped in history and awaits only the much-needed work of restoration to become a shrine for the boys and girls of America.

CANNON ISSUES NEW TINKHAM CHALLENGE

and obviously made with the intent of not accounting for the $48,300 alleged in his telegram of February 12, 1929, to E. C. Jameson, to have been spent in the State of Virginia. Again, Congressman Tinkham in his speech asked, 'whether or not any of the money received from E. C. Jameson was used by him on account of any personal indebtedness?' Again, Congressman Tinkham in his speech said, 'he (Bishop Cannon) will stand convicted in the eyes of all honest men of having appropriated that money to his own uses.'

"The above statements, and many other similar statements contained in the speech of June 17, not only do not appear, but are not referred to in the 138-word purported paraphrase of his speech. As the greater part of the speech has already appeared in the newspapers as congressional privileged matter, and as some papers might not desire to republish it over his personal signature if Congressman Tinkham desires to be held responsible for exactly what he said on the floor of the House, let him have several copies of his entire speech typewritten, signing them personally, then sending one to me and one to each of several other indicated persons, thus effectually disclaiming immunity for his entire speech as actually delivered."

FAVORABLE ACTION ON SEA PACT TODAY

BORAH HURRIES DRAFT

ator Johnson, according to the best of advices, will not be able to attach to his opposition movement more than two, or, at the most, four, of his fellow senators. The line-up at the vote s being predicted as:

For a favorable report: Borah (Republican), Idaho; Capper (Republican), Kansas; Gillett (Republican), Massachusetts; Reed (Republican), Pennsylvania; Fess (Republican), Ohio; Goff (Republican), West Virginia; La Follette (Republican), Wisconsin; Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan; Swanson (Democrat), Virgiana; Pittman (Democrat), Nevada; Robinson (Democrat), Arkansas; Walsh (Democrat), Montana; Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi; George (Democrat), Georgia; Wagner (Democrat), New York.

Against a favorable report: Johnson (Republican), California; Robinson (Republican), Indiana; Shipstead (Farm-Labor), Minnesota.

Doubtful: Moses (Republican), New Hampshire; Black (Democrat), Alabama.

Senator Moses is placed in the doubtful column because, although with Johnson he was the leading technician to have the Senate delay action on the treaty until the next regular session in the fall, he has said to close friends that his mind is not definitely set against ratification of the treaty.

Black Not Bound.

Senator Black, who backed Johnson in the futile attempt to get the "secret documents" on the treaty negotiations from the State Department, also is not irrevocably lined up with the "bitter enders."

Contrary to the general opinion, Senator Johnson and his backers do not intend to conduct a filibuster at the special session of the Senate against the treaty. It had been previously thought and reported that Johnson would conduct a smashing campaign against the treaty on the Senate floor, with he primary object of wearing down the patience of the senators and thus induce them to vote to adjourn the special session and go on home on vacation.

The Californian has admitted that he and his followers will be unable to block the favorable treaty report today. Johnson also has said that he now has no real hopes of stopping the Senate from ratifying the treaty during the short special session. His purpose at that session therefore will be, as he has said, merely to state fully and in detail the case of the treaty opposition.

Stimson Still Attacked.

Thus, as the line-up is at present —unless some unforeseen event takes place, the naval treaty negotiated by Secretary of State Stimson and his colleagues at London is certain to be ratified in the immediate future.

Secretary Stimson, however, is still being made a target because of his recent radio address denouncing the antitreaty stand taken by a large number of the admirals of the United States Navy. An editorial in this week's issue of the Army and Navy Journal calls on the Secretary publicly to apologize for what he said.

"Secretary Stimson gave the impression that aggressive militarism alone was opposing the treaty which he negotiated," the editorial set forth, "and he sought to warn the country against its possible domination. Neither the Army nor the Navy wants to eliminate or even dominate civilian control.

"What they want is limitation of armaments which will assure them an even break in the task of defending the country against an enemy."

Mackey Raps Dry Laws In Purcellville Speech

Purcellville, Va., June 22.—Renewing his attack upon the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act, Capt. Crandal Mackey, candidate for Congress in the Democratic primary, declared in an address before the voters in the Town Hall here Saturday night that if he is elected to Congress he will vote against any appropriation in Congress to enforce the eighteenth amendment and Volstead act.

The speaker attacked the Antisaloon League and the power trusts. In the absence of the Democratic county chairman, Dr. G. Frank Simpson, Capt. Mackey was introduced by T. N. Carruthers, of Purcellville.

Man Taken After Motor Chase Faces Rum Charge

Pursuit of a fast-moving automobile at Third and F streets southwest resulted in its capture at South Capitol and S streets last night by Fourth Precinct Motorcycle Policeman J. P. Comiskey and arrest of its driver, who was reported to have attempted to flee after leaping from the car.

The man gave his name as David Lindsey, colored, 27 years old, of F street near Third street southwest. He was charged with possession and transportation of nine one-half gallons of liquor.

Cumberland Man Killed In Railroad Accident

Cumberland, Md., June 22.—Struck by a train while at work at Okonoko, about 20 miles east of Cumberland, on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, yesterday afternoon, Albert M. Keyser, 38, a fireman and emergency engineer, livnig at 23 Race street, was admitted to Alleghany Hospital with internal injuries, and died early today.

The railroad reported that Keyser was struck in the back by the engine of one train as he stepped out of the way of another one.

WHO'ZIT?

1. He was a native of South America.

2. He was a leader in the revolt of South American countries against Spain.

3. At various times he was president of three South American nations, all of which he helped to liberate.

THE OLD TALE OF WOE.

It was unkind of Senator Watson to bring forth the Democratic textbook of 1922 and quote from it the old familiar attacks upon the protective tariff. All the opprobrious epithets, dire prophecies, and viewings with alarm that have been uttered during the recent tariff debate were uttered against the Fordney-McCumber tariff. Pat Harrison's choicest epigrams, it appears, were current eight years ago. If he was not the author of the Democratic textbook of that year he has a grievance against its authors for having preempted his most spontaneous phrases. If there be such a thing as anticipatory plagiarism he should have the law on somebody.

In some respects the propaganda of protective tariff opponents was more forceful in 1922 than it is this year. They say the Smoot-Hawley tariff will cost the people $1,000,000,000 a year, but the assailants of the tariff of 1922 said it would cost the people $6,000,000,000 a year. That was a sum worth while. This year the opposition has not laid stress upon the charge that the tariff will fail to produce revenue. Eight years ago it was predicted that tariff revenue would disappear. On the contrary, receipts from customs have reached over $600,000,000 a year. Foreign nations were to be prevented from selling goods here, and therefore they were to default in their debt payments. Yet the imports have been unprecedented in value and volume, and foreign nations have not failed to pay their debt installments. Americans have been enormous buyers of foreign products, most of which are free of duty.

Every prediction of damage and disaster to follow the enactment of the Fordney-McCumber tariff law was falsified by events. Foreign nations entered objections then, as now, and threats of reprisals were numerous—but they did not materialize. American trade abroad was to dwindle and disappear—but it increased to enormous figures. Consumers were to groan under extortionate tariff taxes that would raise the cost of necessities—but these costs have diminished. Labor was to be deprived of employment—but the country was never so prosperous.

The extraordinary prosperity of the United States was the chief reason for the shifting of the Democratic position on the tariff at the Houston convention in 1928. The platform, while not specifically adopting the Republican principle of protection, was so worded as to convey the inference that protection produced prosperity, and it was declared that the Democratic party would not so revise the tariff as to reduce the size of the workingman's envelope.

The new tariff is better than the Fordney-McCumber tariff. It provides greater protection to agriculture, safeguards industries that have been threatened by insurmountable competition from abroad, and makes it possible promptly to effect necessary adjustments to keep pace with changing conditions without opening up all the schedules. The new tariff insures Americans against cheap competitive foreign labor. Therefore wages will remain high in the United States. Neither foreign producers nor expatriated Americans producing cheap-labor goods abroad can take the American market away from Americans. Senator Watson pointedly remarks that the tariff is not designed to encourage foreign industries based upon starvation labor. It is designed to benefit Americans—all Americans, whether Republicans or Democrats.

With great plausibility, and with undoubted sincerity, Democratic leaders like Senators Robinson and Harrison are contriving to make the tariff the paramount issue of the forthcoming campaign. They believe they can convince the American people that the Smoot-Hawley act, nicknamed the "Grundy tariff," is an abomination, an economic crime, a blow at American prosperity and a disaster to American foreign trade.

Republican stalwarts like Senator Watson welcome a struggle on the tariff issue. President Hoover and Secretary Mellon do not hesitate to approve the measure. The public will have an opportunity to judge the working of the new law before election time. If it is as bad as it has been painted by its opponents no further arguments against it will be necessary. But if the new law should operate as similar laws have operated in the past, without exception, the effort to make it an "issue" will be in vain.

THE VETERANS' BILL.

President Hoover's statement regarding the veterans' relief bill that has already passed the House and that is scheduled to be voted upon by the Senate today, sounds a timely warning. Enactment of this legislation implies positive increase of taxation at the next session of Congress. The measure does not reflect the true desires of veterans' organizations. The bill goes far beyond immediate necessities and it would create grave inequalities, injustices and discriminations among veterans. Moreover, the bill is not based on a sound, scientific policy calculated to stand through the years and under which the Government could give relief to those deserving of it, avoiding at the same time imposition by those who would trade upon their service connection.

The people, of course, would not stand for Government neglect of war veterans. If it were necessary to increse taxes in order that those who fought and suffered in America's wars should be cared for through all their days the American people would shoulder the additional tax burdens in good grace. But the veterans' relief bill as passed by the House and as will be voted upon by the Senate, goes far beyond reasonable requirements. It was approved by the House in a frenzy of political fence repairing and there is danger that it will be considered by the Senate not upon its merits but upon the basis of votes it might purchase in the forthcoming elections.

President Hoover is not opposed to veterans' relief. But, he says, "we must arrive at such a basis as will discharge our manifest national obligation with equity among veterans and to the public." A measure built upon any other basis in the long run will react to political disadvantage. Senators should keep this in mind when they vote upon the bill this afternoon.

BEAUTIFYING COWS.

Beauty doctors are at work in the domestic animal world. It is no new thing, of course, to find combs and brushes especially devised for dogs and cats. Horse jockeys and trainers of blooded stock always take pride in grooming the "kings of the turf." But it now appears that some animal owners, especially those who exhibit their live stock at agricultural shows, have been resorting to stratagems similar to "face lifting" to enhance the beauty of form and feature of their stock.

The Pacific international stock show has issued a warning to those who propose to be represented in its forthcoming exhibition that beauty doctoring of the entrants must be confined to the proper grooming. Hides, manes and tails may be brushed, combed and washed, of course. But W. H. Lytle, State veterinarian of Oregon, declares that the somewhat common practice of filling in under the skin by injecting or "plugging" depressions with tallow, oils or paraffin, so as to correct anatomical deficiencies, is a deception that will not be tolerated, and if resorted to will serve to disqualify the owner as well as his exhibit.

Such practices, according to Mr. Lytle, do not "tend to encourage good breeding or to develop type and superior animals, and besides, it permits unworthy individuals to win over more perfect animals."

Professional cattle exhibitors, he points out, are the principal offenders. At the international live stock show in 1929, he states, six carcasses of 453 beef animals which were entered and later slaughtered showed definite signs of so-called "beauty doctoring," and certain parts of these animals were condemned as unfit for human food. While this was a very small ratio, Dr. Lytle still maintains that the practice of engaging in plastic surgery is a vicious practice and interferes with breeding out animal imperfections. Just what method will be used to defeat the machinations of the animal beauty doctor have not yet been determined, but one thing is certain, he declares: "There is always a test for the tricks which are alleged to be common in every trade, and the old saying 'murder will out' still holds true."

LOW PRICE OF FLOUR.

The low price of wheat is beginning to have an effect upon the price of flour, at least in large contracts. The purchasing agent of Massachusetts, charged with supplying sustenance for the 30,000 inmates and employes of State institutions, has just contracted for six months' supply of flour at $5.05 a barrel. The saving in cost of bread over prices that have long prevailed for many years will be at least $40,000.

For the time being the price of wheat does not show any effects of the stabilizing efforts of the Farm Board. This is explained on the ground that stabilization organizations have not been perfected and that the time for drawing upon last year's surplus has not quite arrived. The new crop is about to move, and its appearance at a time when the Farm Board has millions of bushels stored at a high price has a tendency to drive prices down. But the new supply in certain foreign countries is not up to the average, and there is a prospect that the price of wheat will soon take a turn for the better.

Millers who have stocked up on cheap wheat are in a position to reduce their prices for flour. Here is an opportunity for the purchasing agencies of the Government to make a saving. District of Columbia institutions are heavy flour consumers, and local taxpayers foot the heavy part of the bill. While the wheat market is in the dumps and flour can be bought at a price lower than at any time since 1888 it behooves heavy consumers to make long contracts.

DANGEROUS BRIDGES.

The collapse of the old bridge over the Monocacy River at Frederick Junction seems to have resulted from inexcusable negligence on the part of the Maryland Roads Commission. The commission is now engaged in making an expert survey to determine the cause of a fatal accident that would not have occurred if the officials in charge of traffic in Maryland had been vigilant. The bridge sustained very heavy traffic on the main highway from Washington to Gettysburg and the West. Apparently its supports had not been inspected for many years.

Highway authorities everywhere would do well to take warning from the collapse of the Monocacy bridge. An inspection of bridges should be made—not a superficial look at the condition of the flooring, but an expert examination of the abutments and supports. The shock of automobile, bus and truck traffic is a new and dangerous force that is apt to destroy bridges that were formerly perfectly safe. Highway engineers are responsible for providing new margins of safety beyond those that were necessary under old conditions. Concrete and stone bridges should be constructed on main highways and all of them should be wider than existing bridges.

OKEECHOBEE FLOOD DANGER.

The hurricane which visited Florida in 1928 resulted in the loss of about 2,000 lives, the greatest toll being among the population immediately surrounding Lake Okeechobee. The flooded area within five miles of the lake contained a population of about 7,500, while the total within the area subjected to the flood was about 46,000. When the river and harbor bill was under consideration recently in the House committee it was pointed out by Representative Ruth Bryan Owen and other residents of Florida that the danger from future floods might, and probably would, be averted if dykes were provided to prevent the overflow of the lake. The arguments in support of that proposal were so convincing that the committee recommended an appropriation of $7,000,000 for the prevention of floods in the Lake Okeechobee watershed. The appropriation stands in the bill which has passed Congress.

In the meantime, however, the dreaded recurrence of the flood danger seems to be more imminent than was anticipated even last week, for a telegram to Senator Fletcher reports a rise in the lake level of 17½ feet, with all June rainfall records broken, and Lake Okeechobee still rising at an unprecedented rate. It is feared that as the outlying regions discharge excess rainfall into the lake a disaster equal to that of 1928 may again visit the region. For this reason Senator Fletcher will urge that authorization be granted to the chief of engineers to use such a portion of the appropriation as he may deem advisable for immediate emergency work. Without such authority no steps can be taken before July.

GYPSY MUSICIANS

From the London Times.

In March the uncrowned king of gypsy musicians in Hungary, Bela Radics, the favorite of highest society, died suddenly of heartstroke. He had a burial unprecedented in the history of gypsy musicians. The municipal council of Budapest offered him a grave of honor and 50,000 people were present at the funeral in the churchyard of Kerepes. Five hundred gypsy musicians played him to his grave, but there were many thousands left who had no opportunity to come and see their sovereign home to mother earth.

The popularity and fame of Bela Radics was so great that the confederation of gypsy musicians decided to commemorate him by a concert equally unprecedented.

On May 29, which is a great holiday in Hungary, a crowd of nearly 200,000 spectators assembled in and around the great stadium of Budapest. Special trains from every part of the country brought their multitudes, and the state railways granted them reduced fares. In the boxes there were almost all the ministers and members of the foreign legations, some members of the Hungarian government, many representatives of the Hungarian aristocracy and gentry, high-born ladies, young and old, who remembered happy hours spent under the charm of this high priest of Hungarian song, and thousands of the poorest classes to whom Bela Radics would play with as full a heart as when he played to crowned heads.

Never was there such an orchestra. Nearly 800 violins, 26 cymbals, 80 contrabassos, 140 bass-viols and 124 clarionets struck up first the national anthem of Hungary, then some sad Hungarian songs of the eighteenth century, then the favorite song of the late Queen Elisabeth about "the poplar-tree which has lost its silvery leaves," and lastly a succession first of slow and then of quick "Csardas," the national dance, passing over with a swirl into the march of Rakoczi, the notes of which were lost in the gigantic applause of hundreds of thousands.

No leader with a magic rod conducts a Hungarian gypsy orchestra. The prime violinist, or primas, simply stands up and begins to play anything which occurs to him. Instantly the band strikes in and follows him in perfect harmony. So it was this time; there was no discipline in that huge gypsy orchestra, there had been no rehearsal, but all knew what was going to be played and watched with one eye the rise and fall of the prime violinist's bow. They played like one man, and not an eye in that vast assembly remained unmoist at the wailing of so many "drywoods," as the gypsies call their fiddles.

The cymbal-players' thin sticks, wrapped at the end with soft white wadding, jumped frantically over the strings like butterflies playing in the sunshine. The murmur of the contra-bassos, at first scarcely audible, rose by degrees until it was like a thunderstorm; the prime violinists swung gracefully from right to left, as their custom is, to indicate the strength of the notes; up went the clamor of their instruments to heaven like a prayer imploring the favor of the Lord.

JUST FOLKS

HOPE.

There must be in the breasts of all
A hope that triumphs over doubt,
A spark that never quite goes out
However bitterly rains fall,
Or burdens fret or fetters gall.
Though every dream is put to rout
And care seems everywhere about
Men wait with faith joy's promised call.

Beyond this present life or soon
Shall come the peace they have not found,
As roses bud with every June
And autumn brings the harvest round
Men, patient in their care, can see
The future joys which are to be.

The Reward You Offer Always Seems Too Generous After the Wolf Is Killed.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

In a republic wars make presidents.

Men who have endured hardship and danger together unite to help one another when peace comes.

The reaction from war's discipline gives them a feeling of bitterness—a vague sense of having been defrauded.

They have a grievance against society.

In other lands and other ages such men have been a constant threat to established authority; in some instances they have seized the reins of government.

In the United States following the war between North and South the votes of veterans dominated the ruling party, and in all sections a war record was sufficient qualification for public office.

Today the veterans of the last war are sufficiently united and so strong politically that few congressmen dare to oppose their wishes.

The veterans' lobby is one of the strongest in Washington.

Such strength is an ever-present menace to the Treasury.

When men who desire pensions for themselves or their comrades are sufficient in number to threaten the defeat of congressmen any sum they desire is theirs for the asking.

War pensions increase periodically, as congressmen asking for reelection feel the need of some new reason to merit the support of veterans.

As this is written Congress is considering a bill that will cost the country $400,000,000 and provide pensions as high as $250 a month—even for men who served but a week and felt no ill effect of their service until ten years later.

It seems a tremendous price to pay for votes.

But there is another side of the question—a side seldom mentioned in time of peace.

It is customary to say that pension money is paid by the government.

But "government" is merely a word; the pensions are paid by taxpayers.

Veterans are taxpayers, and thus must contribute a share of the money they receive back in the form of pensions.

But wars are fought by poor men, for the poor are many and the rich few; and taxes are paid by rich men who do not go to war.

The rich, who did not fight for their country, pay the pensions of the poor who did.

Property pays a reward to those who defended it.

Those enriched by war pay a little of their winnings to those who did the fighting.

And neither $250 a month nor $2,500 a month can fairly compensate the man forced to quit his peaceful pursuits, risk his life against his will and suffer wounds to settle the quarrel of statesmen while other men remained at home to garner riches.

That is a side of the story too easily forgotten.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

OVERHEARD IN A MILLION AMERICAN HOMES.

He—Well, I see Helen is still holdin' out.

She—Helen who?

He—Helen, the wife of that Roumanian king.

She—Oh, Mrs. Carroll, you mean.

He—Not Mrs. Carrol. Carol is only his first name.

She—Well, anyhow, I hope she don't weaken and take that bird back.

He—Why not?

She—He ran off with another woman, didn't he? He deserted her and her baby, the big oil-can!

He—There's two sides to every story.

She—Of course you'd find some excuse for Carol. But if you ask me, he's no good and if she takes him back she should have her head examined.

He—He's a king, don't forget; and she'll be a queen if she says the word.

* * * *

She—He may be a king by royal decree but he's just a shiek by instinct. I wouldn't give him houseroom. If Helen takes him back without him giving up that Nabisco woman, she's nuts.

He—The name ain't Nabisco.

She—What is it, then?

He—Lepesky. Can't you ever remember names?

She—Whatever her name is, she's certainly got her nerve with her coming right back to Roumania before Carol has hardly got settled.

He—Must a girl stay away from her own country forever just because her boy friend got to be a king?

She—She's still after him, that's what. And she wouldn't be following him without his consent. They're still as thick as ever.

He—Have a heart. He may be all right now. Maybe he's just sown his wild oats and reformed. He had Helen's divorce annulled, didn't he, so she could return to him?

She—Annulments are a dime a dozen over there.

He—Why not give him the benefit of the doubt? What can Helen lose by giving him a chance to prove he's on the level?

She—Lissen—she married him once and he ran out on her, didn't he? He stayed away four or five years and didn't even send her a souvenir postcard. He spent most of the time with that sweety of his, didn't he? Then times got a little hard and he got bored with himself and he decided he would take a crack at being king again. To his own surprise he got away with it. And now that he's sitting pretty he invites Helen to kiss and forget.

He—I know but——

She—Flannel-cakes! If she goes back to him without a public apology and a contract in writing that he is through being a vagabond lover, she deserves whatever she gets. And get on with your dinner! The coffee's getting cold.

CAN YOU REMEMBER—

Away back when a stock quoted around $300 a share dropped 5 points the decline was called a collapse?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Col. Ethan Allen May Have Held Odd Opinions, But He Was No Ignoramus.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Referring to the editorial in The Post regarding John Pell's search for an authentic portrait of Ethan Allen, may I add a few words by the way of postscript?

It has perhaps been unjustly claimed that Col. Allen was "a blustering frontier hero—an able-minded ignoramus of rough and ready humor, of boundless self-confidence, and of a shrewdness in thought and action equal to almost any emergency." Such a claim is that of Moses Coit Tyler in his "Literary History of the American Revolution" (2 vols., New York, 1897).

Up to the time of the appearance, last fall, of Mr. Pell's work, there was no adequate biography of Ethan Allen, although several previous attempts had been made, including those of Jared Sparks (Boston, 1834), Hugh Moore (Plattsburg, 1834), and Henry Hall (New York, 1892). Henry W. De Puy's "Ethan Allen and the Green Mountain Heroes of '76" (Buffalo, 1853), and John Spargo's short appreciation, "Ethan Allen at Ticonderoga" (Rutland, 1926), should also be noted.

It is to be supposed that in searching for pictures, Mr. Pell of course saw the portrait of Ethan Allen (decidedly different from the one in "Appleton's Cyclopedia of American Biography," for example) that accompanies the somewhat extended literary biography of Allen by the Ducychinck brothers, Evart and George, in their "Cyclopedia of American Literature" (2 vols., New York, 1856).

As Allibone claimed, Allen held some very foolish opinions, two of them being that men after death are metamorphosed into beasts, birds, fishes, reptiles, &c., and that he himself would live again in the form of a large white horse. As Allen published, however, a number of controversial pamphlets and well-written books, it is doubtful if the man was an ignoramus. Washington observed, in an official letter of May 12, 1788, that there was an original something in Allen which commanded admiration.

That Col. Allen was not an ignoramus is now admitted even by the conservative "Britannica," which says of one of his several literary productions (namely, "Narrative of Colonel Ethan Allen's Captivity"), that it is "the most celebrated book in the 'prison literature' of the American revolution."

EMMETT JOHN.

Mr. Reeves Likes His Neighbors' Loud Speakers and All Other City Sounds.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Our District Commissioners are just now being praised by the press and a few others for their regulation putting the kibosh on loud speakers. For my part I think all this talk about city noises is poppycock.

So far as the loud-speaker is concerned I like to sit on the front porch or lie abed in my back room of a summer night and enjoy the free concert of jazz, wise-cracking, and soulful crooning provided by my neighbors.

You see, I am just a plain, ordinary normal human, who doesn't spend all of his spare time chasing around from movie to movie and on all sorts of late automobile trips, thereby getting my nervous system out of gear. After my day's work is done my nerves are always in condition to enjoy my neighbor's loud-speaker, and the old familiar city sounds are just as pleasing in my ears as those of the country are to a countryman.

My opinion is that a good many of those who get peevish about the artistic and other offerings of the radio should consult a nerve specialist.

It is all nonsense to try to regulate the necessary noises of modern life so as to please a few nervous killjoys.

For their benefit, and to save our city heads from a lot of bluffing, I favor the establishment of a hospital for noise neurotics.

Lindbergh's Plane and Washington Monument Chief Attractions to Young Visitors.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Young Americans, when they come to Washington, first ask to see Lindbergh's plane, "The Spirit of St. Louis," and next, the Washington Monument.

Recently two high school excursion parties came here from Wisconsin, consisting of nearly 2,000 boys and girls. Most of them put Lindbergh's plane and the Washington Monument as the two chief attractions.

Here educational, patriotic and political leaders may find food for thought in prophesying the future of America.

Honkers Who Use Auto Horns as Signals Are Lawbreakers, But Are Not Suppressed.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The action of the District Commissioners in putting their ban on noisy radios is all to the good. But why omit other sources of discordant sound—barking dogs and raucous auto horns, for instance?

Loud, harsh noises not only injure the health of nervous individuals but are an intolerable nuisance to everybody. The honker who sits in his car and uses his horn to signal to somebody in an apartment eight stories high is a lawbreaker, but the police do nothing.

A. J. SMITH.

Valid Criticism.

Lorain Journal: The continuous blowing of an automobile horn, particularly at 2 in the morning, and in a hotel district of a city is a more serious social offense than parking a car too long or in the wrong place at any time of day.

EVENTS OF INTEREST IN SOCIETY CIRCLES OF CAPITAL

Noted Writer Visits Capital For New Copy

Jackie Wilbur, Personality Expert, Awaits Trip to Hollywood.

DOWN the long avenue of years that Washington has lifted the latch string of hospitality to visitors from many lands, presidents, politicians, artists and leaders in high finance have come to leave or not to leave the stamp of their personality.

Just what is personality and who, on the stage of life, bears its imprint?

Jackie Wilbur, guest at the Mayflower, knows and has written a book of 252 sketches of outstanding figures of history, following the parade of nations from Columbus to Calvin Coolidge. That 1,000,000 copies have been sold is proof positive that "Jackie" knows her "personalities."

For she is a personality expert. And, of course, a woman. Somebody christened her "Jackie" and, although she is now Mrs. Pietro Gladiatore Gentile and manager of the private and public life of her husband, star in Ziegfeld's "Whoopee," she remains to an admiring world—Jackie Wilbur, personality doctor. She is in Washington for a few days, come, perchance, to look things over and pick up "copy" for further sketches. Her famous husband will join her here and they will motor to New York before starting the gypsy trail to Hollywood where Signor Gentile will start in the motion pictures in a few weeks.

Jackie Wilbur, wizard of mental quirks and fancies, knows all the latest wrinkles of character analysis and can bolster up one's social shortcomings and set one straight on the rainbow trail. In her book she tells in swift, sure and dynamic strokes the characteristics which have given to the world men of achievement—personalities, in fact.

Of Quaker birth, she comes from Albany, where at the age of 17 the death of her father and loss of their wealth shifted to her shoulders the care of an invalid mother. She began a career by teaching dancing to the children of her society friends from Albany to Brooklyn, from New York to Greenwich. She became James K. Hackett's personal representative until he went to England, where he died. She still is his wife's American representative.

Miss Wilbur then began helping artists and actors to "find themselves" and soon she found herself the "personality doctor" of Manhattan's theatrical groups.

Came the radio and opportunity. From coast to coast Jackie Wilbur was a household idol for her "Bedtime Stories." She turned her talents to writing and in one year two large editions of her "Word Pictures" for children swept across the book counters of the country.

And one day last October she went to a church in New York to hear a Hindu preacher. A young Italian sang a song in the Hindu tongue. She became acquainted with him and two months later he engaged her as his manager and subsequently, Pietro Gladiatore Gentile became the juvenile lead in "Whoopee," and before long—the clever husband of clever Jackie Wilbur.

In her suite at the Mayflower this writer, dancer, manager and personality expert is surrounded by groups of friends come to discuss her famous sketches of presidents and politicians with whom Washington has laughed and sighed so many years.

He is Democratic member of the Senate finance committee and leading opponent of the recently enacted tariff bill. Senator Harrison will reply to an outline of the tariff made Friday night by Senator James E. Watson.

Senator Hiram Bingham, of Connecticut, will tell why he looks with disfavor upon granting independence to the Philippine Islands, explaining his reasons in a talk over the National Radio Forum Thursday night, replying to the views broadcast recently by Senator Harry B. THE GIRL IN THE AIR

BY JULIE ANNE MOORE

SYNOPSIS.

Janet Decker: Eighteen; with closely cropped head of burnt gold and a pair of large and very quizzical eyes. The flying secretary for

Richard C. Tolbert: President of the Great Eastern Air Transportation Co. and father of Dick Tolbert: An attractive young man, who is an official for the Great Eastern, and who has confessed his love for Janet and whom Janet is beginning to think she loves. He, however, is engaged to Helen Morgan: A society girl, who has just sailed for Europe.

Hugh Temple: An official and pilot of Great Eastern and the man who hired Janet. He has been very considerate to Janet.

Fred Turner: An automobile mechanic, sadly soft on Janet.

Belter: Office manager for Great Eastern.

Miss Sears: Dick Tolbert's secretary.

The Great Eastern transports a huge shipment of cash destined for a New York bank. Temple is pilot and Tolbert, sr., and Janet make up the crew. The armored car, which was supposed to meet the shipment of money at the flying field near New York, is not there when they arrive. Temple is left in charge of the plane and money while Tolbert and Janet go on to New York. The money, the plane and Temple suddenly disappear. Janet meets Dick Tolbert, who has come to New York to see his fiance, Helen Morgan, off for Europe. Dick tells Janet he loves her, but Janet says it isn't fair to Helen. Janet meets Helen and is insulted, while Dick stands by and does nothing.

When Janet returns home Fred Turner calls and shows her an engagement ring he has bought for her. Janet tells him she can't wear it now. Fred, hurt, slips the little velvet-lined box into his pocket and reaches for his coat.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER IX.

"Oh, no, you're not," Janet cried, taking Fred's coat and hat away from him. "You're a big kid, Fred, to act like that. Why don't you look at it from my side once instead of swelling all up the minute I tell you I can't take the ring?"

"I thought you'd be tickled over it," he told her grimly. "I don't know why I did. I was fool enough to think you were in love with me, I guess."

"You're not being fair now, Fred," Janet rebuked him. "If I didn't love you I'd take the ring because it's attractive, because it's what I have always wanted for my very own; but I wouldn't be thinking of you or the love that's behind it. I'd just be satisfying my own vanity. You're disappointed because I didn't grab it and make a big fuss over it, and you're saying things you don't mean."

Margaret was singing in the dining room as she set the table for supper, and her high, sweet voice came to them as from a great distance, soft muffled.

"The other night," Janet resumed quietly, "you asked me to marry you, Fred. I told you I'd need time to think before I could answer you. Now you offer me an engagement ring. It's another way of asking me the same question again; and you haven't given me time enough to think things out. The moment I accept that ring I've answered your question, and there'll be no going back after that." She laid a hand on his sleeve and closed it until she could feel the tense muscles beneath.

The touch of her hand on his arm brought a warmth to Fred's heart that dissolved the hard little knot of resentment there, and he suddenly looked into the blue eyes that gazed up into his and smiled his surrender.

"Forget it," he said, a little hoarsely. "I guess I let my feelings get away with me, Jan; but I couldn't help it. I haven't been able to sleep for thinking about you since the other night." He glanced toward the dining room door, listening. Margaret was singing. "You haven't even said 'howdy' to me after being off almost two days, Jan," he said awkwardly.

Janet swayed toward him easily and lifted her chin. "It's your place to speak first," she countered, and shut her eyes until she felt his lips, soft and warm, on hers.

Heavy steps in the dining room warned them that Mr. Decker had come in from the back porch. They separated quickly and assumed an air of tell-tale innocence.

The door opened slowly and Mr. Decker's head appeared. "You kids quit talking about the weather and come to supper," he called to them and closed the door again.

The supper hour in the Decker home was not without its compensations. To Mr. Decker it was the one social period in a long and not infrequently arduous day, and he invariably made the most of it.

"You see, mother," he said, when he had seen to it that Fred's plate was generously helped, "you can't kill a Decker whether you put him on the ground or in the air. Janet's been flying all over Connecticut and New York, and there she sits, just as sound as she was before she went off."

"There's nothing to it, Dad," Janet declared. "In a cabin plane you might just as well be in a pullman. You do get a kick when you first get off the ground and see everything dropping away under you, but after that there's nothing to see but clouds and blue sky. Unless you want to keep your face to the window," she added. "The real fun is in a cockpit, with the wind in your face and the roar of the engine in your ears."

Mrs. Decker sighed audibly. "If I had to ride in one or the other," she declared, "I'd take the cabin and I'd want all the curtains down so I couldn't see out." She laughed with the others, but they knew she had not exaggerated her fear of flying.

"One of the mail pilots take you up, Janet?" Mr. Decker inquired.

"No, Dad. I went up with Mr. Tolbert, jr. He's traffic manager and son of the president."

Fred, who had contributed little to the conversation up to this point, asked: "Isn't he the fellow that's going to marry that rich Morgan girl in Watertown?"

Janet's cheeks burned and she dared not look up. "I think so," she answered, striving to hold a casual tone. "Will you have another cup of coffee, Fred?"

"Oh, baby!" exclaimed Margaret. "Look at Jan blush. There's another story about this Tolbert fellow we aren't getting. You'd better look out, Fred; you've got competition or I miss my guess."

"Marge!" Janet admonished her. "It isn't nice to say things like that. I'm not blushing, and there isn't another story. Mr. Tolbert was very nice to me. But so was every one else."

How had the conversation ever gotten around to Dick Tolbert? And why in the name of heaven had Margaret teased her about him? She must have given herself away. But why had she blushed? Dick Tolbert was no more than an unpleasant memory now.

It was rather hard to forget that some of it had not been unpleasant; but forget she would. He had behaved like a cad after giving her reason to believe that she meant something to him. There was no point in letting herself go over the old ground again like this; but she couldn't help it. At any rate, Dick Tolbert was out of her life, and that was that.

* * * *

Janet knew, when she and Fred had put on their coats and gone out to tramp through the sharp night air, that she would hear more of Dick Tolbert, and when Fred introduced the subject she was prepared.

"About this Tolbert fellow, Jan?" he asked her with pretense at indifference; "is he . . . nice?"

"Quite nice, Fred," she told him; "but before you ask any more questions, I want to give you some good advice. Don't probe around in the hope of finding out whether I'm falling for Mr. Tolbert or not. He doesn't mean any more to me than the price of corned beef in Scandinavia, and I don't intend to be bothered with a lot of questions about him. See, son?"

Fred laughed good naturedly. "Well, you did blush when his name came up at he supper table," he insisted, aimiably, "and the way you get hot now would lead anybody to believe that you were soft on him. But don't get me wrong. Your word's as the government's with me, and all I want to know is this: Do . . . you . . . love . . . me?"

Janet slipped her arm through his and leaned against him playfully as they strolled down the street. "You know, Fred, I think I do love you. I mean really, really. Not puppy love, but something genuine. I'm not sure now, mind you, son; I just said I think I do. That's as far as I'm going right now. If I was positive of it, knew that I loved you enough to take a lot of hard knocks with you without loving you less, I'd——Id ask you for that darling ring and let you spread the news."

Janet was staring straight up at the clear blue night above, her eyes moving from star to star as if she saw in them a familiar design. Somewhere, she thought, under the same dark canopy, under those same twinkling stars was Hugh Temple, dead or alive. If only she could know the truth.

"I told you tonight, Fred, that in the 24 hours I had been on the new job, something terrible had happened. You were decent enough not to be curious, but there's this much I can tell you without betraying a confidence: one of the men who was nicest to me when I took the job has disappeared. I was one of two people who were with him just an hour before it happened. We left him guarding a lot of money and there's good reason to believe that he was overpowered by robbers. It's been on my mind every minute since, and right now I'm wondering if we'll ever see him again."

"You mean you think they bumped him off?"

"I don't know any more about it than you do, but it's possible. And he was such a regular fellow, Fred. No foolishness, understand, but gay and courteous and unselfish. Next to you, Fred, he's about the nicest fellow I ever met. But he wasn't the kind a girl would fall in love with; you just didn't think about him that way. He was more like a brother's supposed to be, and like very few of them are."

For a long while they walked in silence, arm in arm, content to be near each other, each thinking his own thoughts, but held inseparable by that sweet bond of feeling that is fed from the heart only, and not by empty words. Janet's thoughts jumped about nervously, from Temple to Mr. Tolbert, to the amusing little bell-hop in the hotel in New York, to Susie, the missing amphibian; and Dick Tolbert. Fight it as she would, Dick Tolbert persisted in forcing himself upon her thoughts.

Gradually everything but her immediate surroundings faded and Janet asked herself if, after all, her happiness did not rest in this young man who walked by her side, and not in that complex world to which she had been introduced with what was very nearly violence. Fred was clean, and honest and delightfully naive. No need to doubt his simple, straightforward declarations of love.

"I haven't forgotten that you asked me a question a little while ago, Fred," she said suddenly. "At least you said you wondered if I really do love you, and I suppose I'm the only one who can supply that information. As I said before, darling, I think I do. I think very, very strongly that I do. But I'm going to be fairer than that. In the next day or two I'll have to go back to New York with Mr. Tolbert and I'll probably have a lot of time to think. If, when I come back, I feel as I do at this moment, I'll—why, I'll do the natural thing."

"Good gosh! Do you mean that, Jan? Do you mean you'll marry me?"

They had come back to within a block of the Decker home, and to make matters worse, were directly under a street light. Fred was under a decided handicap. "Why the dickens didn't you say that back there where there wasn't so much light? Now all I can do is look at you. What a break! But you'll stick to that, won't you honey? And when you come back . . ."

"Steady, big fellow," Janet warned him. "I said, don't forget, if I feel then as I do now. Don't overlook the possibility that I won't feel this way. Life's cockeyed, Fred, and we never know what's on the next day's docket . . . Is your car parked in front of our house, or the house next door?"

As they drew nearer, Fred said: "It's in front of your house, Jan, and what a boat it is. I'll bet that bus cost plenty."

"Whillikins!" Janet muttered under her breath as they walked toward the porch. "Looks like the Vanderbilts are paying a little social call out of hours."

Margaret met them at the door, a warning finger on her lips. But the gesture was unnecessary, for looking past Margaret, Janet saw Dick Tolbert rising to meet them, and on his lips was that subtly disarming smile that had been her undoing on that first glorious ride in the clouds.

Follow it over an A & P counter

83½ cents go wherever the best food is to be found at least cost to you—in your own neighborhood, in other parts of the country, or in foreign lands . . . Every cent of this part of your dollar is on the job for you every day. It comes back to you as food—the kind you prefer.

14 cents stay at home—for your landlords, salary and wage earners who live among you, your tax collectors and community activities, your light, heat, power, and water companies; your newspapers for advertising that tells you special bargain news.

2½ cents, slightly more than the cost of a postage stamp, is the only charge you pay A & P for all this service.

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS

CAUSE OF MILK SICKNESS.

MILK sickness is still a somewhat important disease of man and animals in many parts of the country. The pioneer suffered from it to a degree that we can not understand. The worst or best we can do is to record a few fatalities among humans and an occasional outbreak among domestic animals in July and August of each year. In the main, it is the farmer and his family who suffer, though the citizens of villages and towns are stricken occasionally.

As the name suggests, it is caused by drinking milk from sick cows. If the milk from a cow with trembles is consumed by the farmer's family, or if it is peddled in town, a trail of milk sickness follows. Many of the cases are fatal. If, however, the milk from a sick cow is poured into a large vat filled with other milk from other sources the chances are the consumers will not be made sick. Milk sickness does not occur among patrons of the larger dairies.

For a long time there was much controversy among scientists as to the cause of the difficulty. Finally it was proved that cows and other domestic animals developed trembles as the result of eating white snakeroot. This is a weed that is not found in well-kept pastures. It is likely to grow in wet, shady spots under trees, usually on the edge of the pastures. Animals will not eat this weed until the pastures burn, the weather becomes hot, and the flies are bad. Further studies have shown that the poisonous agent is tremetol. This resin is found in white snakeroot. It can be recovered from the milk of cows suffering with trembles.

One argument used against the white snakeroot theory is that in certain parts of New Mexico and Arizona they do not have white snakeroot, but they do have trembles and milk sickness. Investigation has proved that milk sickness in these sections is caused by rayless goldenrod, and that this plant contains considerable quantities of tremetol. When tremetol is extracted from rayless goldenrod and fed to animals they sicken with trembles.

Hay containing rayless goldenrod is poisonous, which is not true of hay containing white snakeroot.

In milk sickness of both man and animals acidosis is liable to develop. The acidosis is of the same kind as that which sometimes causes coma in diabetes and in pregnancy. This fact suggests a treatment.

The United States Department of Agriculture has a booklet on rayless goldenrod as a cause of milk sickness.

DIET AND EXERCISE.

Mrs. E. S. write: I would like to know what to do to lose a little weight. I am 5 feet 7 inches tall and weigh about 180 pounds. Am 24 years of age. I have a very big stomach and have had it for the last two years. Is there any way to reduce it? Perhaps it is because I eat quite a bit, as I am a hearty eater. What can I do about it?

There are some cases which are designated pathologic obesity. They can be reduced by proper medical treatment.

The tratment of simple obesity consists in dieting, suplemented by work or exercise. As you surmise, "eating quite a bit" is the cause, and refraining "quite a bit" is the cure.

Any one can reduce by cutting down on the eats. Many do that. Where most fat people fail is in permanently adjusting the diet to the work done.

Peglegger

NEW YORK, June 21.—There is a strong temptation to get moral on the proposition of the impending prize fight between Primero Carnera and George Godfrey in Philadelphia and denounce the show on the ground that the Carnera party have shown themselves to be not quite nice. I like to be right-minded and run with the so-called better element in all matters, and the right-minded thing to do in this case obviously is to give the boys a very bad name in a manner of virtuous intrepidity and warn the public away from their show.

But this case is different in the respect that these boys never have pretended to be nice boys, and are giving their party under their own colors, without the slightest appeal for the sanction or patronage of the right-minded. They are what they are, and any one who does not know what they are need only consult their references.

Mr. Owen Madden, who owns the first American rights to Primo, is a town character, who carried matches and sassed his teachers at a tender age. He does not ride with the Greenwich, Conn., hunting set nor drop in at exclusive prep schools to lecture the sons of the aristocracy on clean living, regular hours and the importance of being earnest.

Business Associate Of Madden.

Mr. Will Duffy, who owns the second American rights to Primo, is a business associate of Mr. Madden in activities which I can only describe as one thing and another, having no definite information thereon.

He also conducts night clubs, and, while he is polite to his guests, he is, nevertheless, a character that an author could use, just as he is, in a book or drama about a Broadway night club proprietor.

Mr. Good-Time Charlie Freedman, owner of the third American rights in this weird misshappen stranger, is an associate of Mr. Duffy. Their names stand together on the door of a small office on the third floor of the Cauliflower Board of Trade, a block called the Publicity Building, at Forty-seventh street and Broadway. Incidentally, Joey Jacobs, manager of Max Schmeling, formerly was associated with Mr. Duffy, and, at the present time, he occupies another small office next door, a circumstance that might be of interest in the not unlikely event of a prize fight for the heavyweight championship of the world between Mr. Jacobs' guy and Mr. Duffy's guy at some future time.

Mr. Leon See Has Name on Door.

Also lettered on the glass pane of Mr. Duffy's door is the name of Mr. Leon See, a Frenchman of almost fabulous character, who came over with Primo last January and who owns some kind of rights in and to the property, having obtained him from a trusting, sluggish blonde French heavyweight prize fighter named Paul Journee, a former sparring partner of Georges Carpentier, who appears to have been the one to see Primo first of all.

Some time ago I saw a note in the cable stuff reporting that Journee was thinking of sailing for the United States to enforce his property rights, demand an accounting and sue for

Indians Beat Macks As Ferrell Wins 11th

Cleveland, Ohio, June 22 (A.P.).—Cleveland bats, impotent through seven losing games, rang lustily today as the Indians hammered out a 4 to 2 victory over the league leading Philadelphia Athletics. Shores and Rommell were pounded for a dozen hits while Wes Ferrell was allowing but seven in winning his eleventh game of the season.

Jamieson marked his return to the Indian line-up by cracking out three doubles in four times up. Twice Cleveland rallies were nipped on double plays from the outfield. Miller and Haas caught short flies and threw home in time to nip runners trying to score from third.

Giant Italian Meets Negro Heavyweight at Philadelphia.

Rosenbloom - Slattery Bout Shares Spotlight for Week.

PHILADELPHIA, June 22 (A.P.).—The big boys, Primo Carnera, Italy, and George Godfrey, Leiperville, Pa., Negro, went through the final motions today, and at the end of brief workouts were pronounced fit for their ten-round collision at the Phillies' ball park tomorrow night.

Because of the unusual weight the battling giants will lug into the arena the underpinning has been strengthened with steel beams. Primo will scale about 268 and the Black Panther about 245.

Owing to the size of the fighters' hands, their gloves will be almost skin tight. So much of the 6-ounce weight limit was used in the extra amount of leather required that very little padding was necessary.

Camera Expects Knockout.

Carnera, with a long string of quick knockouts to his credit since his American invasion began six months ago, expressed confidence through his manager tonight that Godfrey would go the way of his other opponents and be counted out before the final round. He conceded the dusky Goliath the greater experience and the greater boxing skill, but said Godfrey could not stand up under his powerful punches to the body.

Godfrey figured left hooks to either stomach or jaw would pave the way for a knockout wallop, and predicted the ambling Alp would be dropped for the count, possibly in the early rounds.

Yanks Win Opener, Lose Second to Browns

New York, June 22 (A.P.).—The Yankees broke even with the Browns in today's double header, winning the first, 5 to 4, and losing the second, 5 to 2. With the A.'s losing to Cleveland, the Yankees cut their lead to two games. In the second game Blaeholder, though hit freely by the Yankees, pitched well in the pinches. Browns hit Cherid timely. Ralph Kress, shortstop, led the attack with four hits, while Dickey did the best for New York with three.

Errors played a big part in the first game. With two out and the score tied, Gullic dropped Resse's fly, and the next three batters hit safely, the Yankees rolling up five runs, enough to win the game.

Both Pipgras and Coffman pitched splendid ball. Babe Ruth walked three times, the only passes in the game, and beat out a bunt.

U. S. Net Aces Favored in England

Wimbledon Tourney Opens Today With Stars in Field.

Tilden, Mrs. Moody Are Outstanding Favorites.

By FRANK H. KING

WIMBLEDON, ENG., June 22. (A.P.).—The blue ribbon classic of European tennis—the British championships—gets under way here tomorrow with 224 competitors from 23 countries. Play will continue for two weeks to find title winners in men's and women's singles and doubles and mixed doubles.

So far as Wimbledon's women's singles championship is concerned, they might as well hand it to Helen Wills Moody for the fourth year running. The only formidable opposition to America's champion of champions is Helen Jacobs, who in the seeded draw is expected to contest the final with Mrs. Moody just as she did last year.

Mrs. Watson and Spanish Star Withdraw.

Mrs. Phoebe Watson of the British Wightman Cup Team, who took five straight games from Mrs. Moody in the International Cup matches a few days ago, and Senorita Elia de Alvarez, Spanish star, have withdrawn from the tournament on doctor's orders, making the American champion's task all the easier.

With Elizabeth Ryan as Mrs. Moody's doubles partner, this American pair probably will win the woman's doubles championship, although their task will not be nearly so easy as Mrs. Moody's is expected to be in women's singles.

Big Bill Tilden is the center of unusual interest at Wimbledon this year, mainly because of the great sequence of tournament successes the tall Philadelphian has enjoyed since early this year. He has been beaten only twice in all this time, and Henry Cochet, of France, who was responsible for one of Tilden's beatings, will be at Wimbledon to try to halt Big Bill again.

Tilden to Get Help From American Mates.

Although Tilden is the most formidable American threat in men's singles, he will have plenty of support from the American Davis Cup Team, George Lott, of Chicago; Wil-

Brooklyn, June 22 (A.P.).—On the power supplied by terrific slugging in the late innings, the Robins came from behind to beat Pittsburgh today, 9 to 6. Babe Herman hit two timely home runs, bringing his total for the season to fifteen. Frederick also hit a homer off Larry French, who pitched the whole game for Pittsburgh.

"Footsy" Blair Starts Cubs On Streak as Hornsby Sub

"TOOTSY" BLAIR.

CHICAGO, June 21 (A.P.). — "Footsy" Blair stepped in Rogers Hornsby's big shoes at second and started the Chicago Cubs off on a winning streak.

The husky 6-footer from Texarkana, Tex., took Hornsby's place when the Rajah fractured his ankle on May 30. In his first game, Blair clubbed out a homer, two doubles and a single, driving in six runs, enabling the Cubs to come from behind and annex the second of the Memorial Day bill with the St. Louis Cardinals.

A winning streak followed. Blair had considerable to do with each game won.

Blair's forte with the bat is hard smashes along the foul line, usually to left field. Slow and fast balls look the same to him. His blows are powered by 190 pounds of muscle. Defensively he has done well, although errors are credited to him because of his eagerness to cover too much ground.

Blair was with the Cubs last year, and batted .319, although he spent most of his time on the bench. He is 27.

Reveille Boy Misses Chance For Purse in $70,000 Race

Owner of American Derby Winner Lacked Cash for Entry; Would Have Raced Against Gallant Fox; Hertz Pleased.

CHICAGO, June 21 (N.Y.W.N.S.). Disappointed people who looked with a jaundiced eye on the result of the American Derby won by Reveille Boy, are calling the colt a "badge" horse, because he is the only horse in the stable of his owner, J. A. Best, former grocer of Memphis.

He is far from a badge horse. His owner was so low financially that his stable was confined to one colt. But he has the mare, Little Ann, the dam of Reveille Boy.

The happiest man over the result is John Hertz, owner of Reigh Count. He and Richard Brown, of New York, own the sire of Reveille Boy—Last Reveille.

A year ago when John Hertz established the Leona thoroughbred nursery, with Reigh Count as Sultan, he looked around for a second stallion to Reigh Count. He purchased an interest in Last Reveille and he is there with ten youngsters of his get.

Best lives in a modest boarding house in Crete, 5 miles from Washington Park. He has no jockey. Brok had no mount so he took him and gave the jockey $5,000 for his victory. The Derby winner was not nominated for the classic, the big $70,000 race at Arlington Park on July 12, because Best had not the money. Thus he won't get a chance to run for the richest 3-year-old prize of the year for the classic may gross $90,000 and he won't get a chance to meet Gallant Fox in the rich fixture which last season decided the 3-year-old championship when Blue Larkspur galloped to victory.

Cantlon Is Winner In 100-Mile Contest

Akron, Ohio, June 22 (A.P.).—"Shorty" Cantlon, of Detroit, won the 100-mile automobile race on the Cleveland-Akron Board Speedway near here today. It took him 1 hour 27:31:15 to circle the track 200 times.

Russell Snowberger, of Philadelphia, finished second, and Chester Gardner, of Douglas, Ariz., third.

Between 12,000 and 13,000 persons watched Cantlon garner 12 points in the American Automobile Association driving championship chase by outdriving nine other starters around the half-mile saucer. Seven drivers finished.

Billy Arnold, of Chicago, winner of the Indianapolis and Altoona races, lost a chance to clinch the driving championship when he became ill and turned his car over to Eugene Haustein, who brought it in fourth. Arnold drove only about 25 miles.

Tigers Beat Red Sox Twice, 5-3 and 4-2

Boston, June 22 (A.P.).—Detroit took a double-header from the Boston Red Sox, 5 to 3 and 4 to 2, here today. The second game was called at the end of the sixth inning because of the Sunday sports law.

Milton Gaston, for the Sox, and Whitehill, for the Tigers, pitched gilt-edged ball in the first game, but their support was poor, all runs scored in the game being unearned.

Gehringer's home run, with Johnson on base, in the fifth inning, decided the abbreviated second game in Detroit's favor.

Cardinals Take Pair From Phils, 12-3, 9-3

St. Louis, June 22 (A.P.).—The Cardinals hit hard behind first-rate pitching today and conquered the Philadelphia Phillies, 12 to 3 and 9 to 3.

After a rather shaky start Burleigh Grimes settled down in the nightcap and had no trouble winning. It was his first start since coming to the Cardinals from Boston. Grimes allowed thirteen hits, but they came when they did little damage. In the opener Flint Rhem let the visitors down with five hits.

Jim Bottomley, Cardinal first baseman, who had been at bat 25 times previous to today's games without getting a hit, hit safely on his first three trips to the plate today, one of the blows being good for a home run.

In the second game George Fisher hit a home run inside the park and Catcher Davis, of the Phillies, was ejected from the game for protesting the decision at the plate.

Important Series to Open With Double Bill Today.

Judge May Return to Action; Johnson Sees Rookies.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

WASHINGTON'S third-place position in the race will be at stake in the series with the Indians, which starts this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock with a double-header, and the Nats will have to play better ball, both hitting and fielding, and get better pitching than they did against the White Sox if they hope to even hold their own with the Clevelanders, who are here for four games, single ones being listed for tomorrow and Wednesday.

Manager Walter Johnson admits that his men disappointed him in the series with the White Sox, which ended yesterday. Against this seventh-place club, the Capital Citylns were able to do no better than break even—nothing to be proud of for a club rated as a pennant contender.

"General" Alvin Crowder, who has pitched two good games since joining the Nationals, although beaten in one, will do the slab work in one of today's games while Fred Marberry is expected to get the call in the other. Peckinpaugh likely will call on Willis Hudlin and Ken Holloway for his pitching.

There is a possibility that Capt. Joe Judge will be back at first base in one of this afternoon's games. He gave his charley-horse leg some real tests before yesterday's game, even including starting quickly from a sprint position and some long-distance hiking around the park, and reported afterward that he did not even feel a tinge.

Johnson has told Judge that he can get back in the line-up any time he is ready and he may decide to take a chance today. If so, he plans to play in only one game, as he believes that it would be wise for him to do his comeback by easy stages.

MT. RAINIER A. C. again leads the race for championship laurels in the Prince Georges County section of the Capital City League as the result of yesterday's narrow decision over the Hyattsville All-Stars at Riverdale by an 8-to-7 count.

The loss dropped the All-Stars into a tie with the Dixie Pigs, who defeated Berwyn, 7 to 1, for the runner-up berth. The Brentwood Hawks scored their second victory to tie for fourth place at the expense of the Bowie A. C. Nine, 6 to 3, at Bowie.

After taking a two-run lead in the third, the Mounts wavered and Hyattsville knotted the count in the fifth. Mount Rainier counted three runs in the sixth, but their foes came back with as many to deadlock the issue again. The Mounts gained the edge by scoring two in the seventh. Oscar Hiser and George Brandt kept Hyattsville in the running with timely home runs.

Clapper Allows Three Hits.

Babe Clapper held the Berwyn sluggers to three hits, but the Dixies trailed for five innings before they launched their winning assault on the offerings of Giddings. Radke's homer with the bases loaded in the eighth clinched the verdict.

Ensor's double with two on enabled the Brentwood Hawks to forge ahead in the closing rounds. He drove over the tying runs in the eighth, and Catlin was touched freely for three runs in the ninth. Walter Hurley pitched his first game for the Hawks and turned in a good effort.

Boots and Saddles
(Reg. U. S. Patent Office.)
—Washington Park Selections—
By J. B. SNODGRASS.

WASHINGTON PARK closes its meeting of 30 days on Saturday and racing begins on the same day at Latonia for a period of 37 days, and the Latonia Derby will feature the Kentucky track's long season. John A. Best has shipped his little horse, Reville Boy, to Latonia, to get him ready for that stake, after having beaten the large field in the $50,000 added American Derby.

The Washington Park card today is featured by the Hubbard Woods handicap. This number has brought out some fast sprinters, of which BROWN WISDOM is believed the best, even with 124 pounds, conceding 10 pounds to GOLDEN PRINCE and 22 pounds to as fast a horse as T. S. JORDAN. BROWN WISDOM carried 125 pounds and beat KARL EITEL, PIGEON HOLE and SILVERDALE, and the last-named horse has just set a new record at this track. GOLDEN PRINCE appears to be the contender, at the weights, while T. S. JORDAN is carrying the lightest impost he has had since last August.

The other starters in this are PAUL BUNYAN and MARTIE FLYNN, the last named being coupled with T. S. JORDAN.

FIRST RACE—C. N. Freeman's FOREIGN BET is picked to win. She has never started but once, winning that race easily. She may be a real good one. PORT GAR, throwing out her last race, seems the contender. CHRISTIE FLANAGAN for third money.

SECOND RACE—is a good spot for J. N. Camden's ARUNDEL. The race is for two year old maidens and ARUNDEL was second to INSCO last out. PORTCODINE should be the contender on his second to Hyman. POLINOS, which is coupled with ARUNDEL, will hold the others safe.

THIRD RACE — ORMON BIRD stands out. He was beaten a nose by Ruane the other day. That was a good race and if repeated would win here easily. DUNMORE and CABILDO will fight it out for place.

FOURTH RACE — TENNESSEAN should win. He was beaten a head by Chatterblack last week. He will have VOLTMETER to beat, MORSNUFF may improve.

SIXTH RACE—BETTY ANN is selected to win. Her last effort was her worse in a long time, but on general form, she is best. She beat Apt a short time ago, and should do so again in this race. MISS MARNIE has a good chance to show. She has beaten BETTY ANN.

SEVENTH RACE—SEMPER FELIX is picked to beat the cheap ones. MARGATE is the contender. If the track should get muddy, it would not impair his chances. ONUP has a fair chance at the show money.

BILL HARE'S Spengler Post Nine shattered Victory Post's undefeated record in the American Legion series yesterday, thereby creating a triple tie for the runner-up berth, with Sergt. Jasper Post's representatives out in front by a single game.

Spengler defeated Victory in a bitter 3-to-1 battle, while Sergt. Jasper's Nine triumphed over Lincoln, 15 to 9, and George Washington routed Nash, 13 to 3.

Mickeljohn gave another phenomenal pitching exhibition for Spengler Post, fanning seventeen batsmen while limiting the opposition to five safeties. Vienstein led the winning attack with a pair of doubles.

Lincolns Furnish Fight Against Jaspers.

Lincoln gave Sergt. Jasper a real battle before bowing. Everett Russell worked well in spots for the victors, but poor support and his own wildness, coupled with Palsgrove's lusty triple in the fourth, made things look serious for the leaders for a while.

The hitting of B. Robertson and Waters featured the George Washington-Nash contest.

CONTRIBUTING another upset in the District section of the Capital City League unlimited series yesterday by trimming the Anacostia Eagles at Congress Heights, 5 to 2, the Burroughs A. A. Nine moved into third place as the Columbia Heights Nine easily defeated the Skinker Eagles, 13 to 1, to retain an undefeated record, and the St. Joseph's A. C. Champs routed the Mohawks, 27 to 3.

A complete shake-up in the standings of the lower clubs came as the result of yesterday's games. The Army Medicos continued their winning ways by turning back the Foxall A. C. Nine on Foxall Field, 11 to 0, and the Aztecs scored their second win in a row over the Woodmen of the World, 5 to 4.

Jack Farrington and Shaute Taylor pitched effectively for the Saints, while the powerful offensive of the defending champs piled up 31 hits, two of them home runs by Shapiro. Three Mohawk hurlers were flayed by the relentless barrage of safe blows laid down by the winners. Buscher collected five hits for the Saints.

Woods Scatters Bingles.

Woods held the Foxall clubbers to seven scattered hits and was always master, giving the Medicos a clean-cut shutout decision. He also hammered out a home run and double to aid his team's cause.

Heimie Newman had a big day all around for the unbeaten leaders. He held the Skinker Bros. Eagles to two hits and accounted for three timely hits himself. Lee played a clever game afield and starred at bat for Columbia Heights.

Although outhit, the Woodmen made a stubborn stand before bowing to the Aztecs. The Woodmen tied the score in the ninth but were unable to hold their rivals in the final half. Mulhall's work at bat and afield and Wesley's home run featured for the Aztecs.

After battling on even terms for seven frames, the Burroughs Nine managed to finish strong to gain a close verdict over the Anacostians. McMullen and Caspar led at bat for the victors. Bladen turned in another crack pitching performance, holding the Eagles to five scattered hits.

Ballston Nine Easy For Annapolis, 19-0

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., June 22.—Without half trying, the Annapolis Baseball Club defeated a group calling themselves the Arnold Bus Co., of Ballston, Va., by 19 to 0, at the local park this afternoon. Unquestionably the contest marked the appearance of the worst club ever to be placed on exhibition in these parts. The visitors' odd uniforms and gloves were the only sembiance they had that bespoke baseball. The Ballstons were entirely void of ability but, what was still worse, lacked incentive.

to make a fine stop of Cissell's roller in round 4, but had no chance to make the out at first and his wild heave which followed gave Cissell an extra base. Myer then went back in the grass toward first to take Kamm's grounder to end the frame.

NATS POUND WAY TO 10-3 VICTORY

holding the Chisox to but five hits, which were scattered in as many innings, and two of the allen runs were tainted, due to errors by Myer and Cronin. Liska was wilder than usual, issuing a round half-dozen passes, but when he did get the ball over, the visiting swatsmiths could do little with it.

Loepp gave the Nats a good start by singling. When Rice was hit and Manush obtained a scratch safety on his intended sacrifice, the runways were loaded and Cronin's walk forced one run over. Shire's one-baser to Clancy netted another run and then Myer shot a drive to left-center which propelled two more home. Myer ran with his head down and suddenly woke up to find both himself and Shires on second. He hustled back to the initial sack, but was caught. Shires, meanwhile, had dashed for third and when Clancy threw over Kamm's head, Art trotted home with the final run of the frame.

With two down, Manush's single and Cissell's error on his theft, another base on balls to Cronin, and Shires' single netted one run in the second, while the Nats called it a good day's work when they scored four more tallies in the fourth canto

West opened this latter frame with a single, Rice was hit for the second time, this blow putting him out of commission, and both advanced on Manush's out, a play which no one but the umpires can explain and they probably won't. Manush rolled to Hunnefield, who took the ball and tried to race to Rice to second for a force play. Apparently he did so and then his peg to also get Manush at first seemed to be late by yards. From the stands, it looked as though Rice was out and Manush safe, but the arbiters ruled just the opposite.

Walsh Hurls Well From Fourth On.

After an argument, during which Harris replaced Rice on second, Cronin drew his third successive pass of the game, filling the bases, and Shires and Myer immediately proceeded to empty them. The latter's blow propelled Shires to third and he came home after Reynold's catch of Bluege's long fly. Walsh granted but four scattered hits over the balance of the route, but it so happened that the Nats didn't need any more.

While all these doings were going on, Liska was having only minor troubles. He pulled out of a hole in the Sox' opener when Kerr, first up, trippled and fell a double-play victim, with Myer and Ruel doing some nifty stunts afield. In the second, Myer's first error, a walk, Cissell's single and Kamm's air suicide gave the Sox two of their runs, while their only other real threat came in the sixth, when they scored only once after filling the bases with none down as a result of another miscue by Myer, a single and a base on balls. After one was forced at home, another registered on Tate's infield out. With the sacks still fully peopled when Walsh also drew a walk, Manush took Hunnefield's fly to end the inning.

Liska walked ont but granted nary a hit from this inning on. Of the five bingles he yielded, Clancy showed the way for the White Sox by getting two.

NATS MEET TRIBE IN DOUBLE-HEADER

ager Johnson is trying to figure out a way of getting some good pinch-pitching. He has in mind shifting Marberry back to relief roles after today's game unless the big Texan pitches so well against the Indians as to earn, himself a place as a regular. If this proves to be the case, the Nat leader will have to do some more figuring and probably simply will call on some of his regulars to help out from time to time.

The Nats' "2 o'clock" infield gave early comers quite a kick before yesterday's game. This combination was made up of West at third, McLeod at short, Harris at second and Hayes at first. West, by the way, does not look bad at the hot corner. Several times yesterday he almost knocked Hayes off the sack with his speedy pegs.

STOCK PRICES ONLY QUARTER DOWN FROM 1923-1929 SUMMIT

Previous Rises Parallel 1929-30 Bull Movements

Declines, Except in Panic Period, Orderly; 1930 Markets Selective; Average Prices High Compared With Preceding Years, Except 1929.

By IRVING FISHER
Professor of Economics, Yale University.
Special to The Washington Post.

New Haven, Conn., June 22.—Those who trade daily in the stock market are subject to extremes of optimism and pessimism. Recent sharp breaks have accentuated the pessimistic mood of late, and this has tinged the feeling both of investors and of business men. A measure of reassurance is found in my indexes of the levels at which future gains of business are discounted in present stock prices.

My weekly investors' all-industrial stocks, as of the week ended June 14, stands at 140.1, or 35 per cent above the low of the crash last November—not one-quarter of the way down from the summit of average stock prices for the period January, 1923, to September, 1929.

This mountain-top (see Chart 1) had reached itself above the plateau level of 1915-1922. The average is not half-way down, even, to the average of 1926, one of the Nation's most prosperous years.

In only three out of twenty groups of industrial stocks for which I maintain weekly indexes have lows been reached this year that are under the lows of last November. These are the coppers group, which stands 24 per cent under its November low; household goods, 12 per cent lower, and stores, 1 per cent lower. One other group, auto accessories, is down to its November low.

The remaining sixteen groups of stocks listed on the Big Board were, for the week ended June 14, from 5 per cent to 63 per cent above the lows of the 1929 break. Preferred stocks were 6 per cent above the November lows; steels, 7 per cent; office equipment, 10 per cent; machinery, 11 per cent; oils, 14 per cent; motors, 17 per cent; utilities, 26 per cent; tobaccos, 28 per cent; chemicals and farm machinery, each 31 per cent; electrical equipment, 60 per cent, and radios, 63 per cent above their lows, respectively, of the November break.

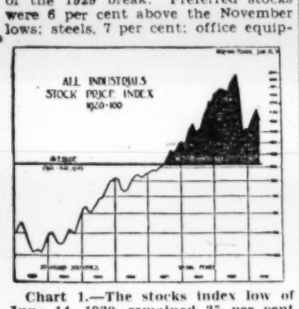

Chart 1.—The stocks index low of June 14, 1930, remained 35 per cent above the low of the 1929 crash—not halfway down to the 1926 average.

Market Proves Selective.

The selective character of this year's stock market, equally noticeable during its bull and bear periods, is illustrated by the range of the group averages enumerated. There has been little reckless indiscriminate speculation, while the average price of common stocks as a whole remains high, as compared with every preceding year except 1929. It is a market subjected, in all its divisions, to the constant scrutiny of investment trusts, investment counsel and experienced individual investors; yet it remains high; which is of good augury for recovery from the business recession.

For it is the function of stock prices to discount, in the present, expected future gains of business. The stock market has invariably done this during the long swings, despite the emotions of the moment and the manipulations of market operators that affect the day-to-day results.

The present level of stock prices, depressed as it has been by a sharp business recession, still indicates that common shares are near the height of their popularity; and this is because they have been absorbing continually the advantages of increased earnings and of earnings plowed back into business during the years since 1922 at increasing rates.

Inventions Affect Level.

Moreover, the present level of stock prices reflects the radically changed estimate of future earnings occasioned by the "mass production" of inventions of American research laboratories; by bettered business management; by the economics of mergers; by the cooperation of labor; by prohibition and other causes. There is today a relatively securer expectation of increased earnings than, for example, during the business depression of 1920-21. For then the country had been subjected to a reckless inflation of commodity prices that was followed by unusually severe deflation, leaving business stunned and the community largely unemployed.

The present recession has been mitigated by the advantages accruing from several years of stable purchasing power of money over commodities. The present decline in the level of commodity prices has been small relatively to 1920-1921. On this account investors today regard the risks of investment in common stock with some equanimity. At no time since the crash last fall has the popularity of investment in equities been so dampened as in other postpanic history. I am still of the opinion that, in spite of the harm done to common stock investment by the panic last fall, investment trusts and investment counsel have made it safer in the long run to invest in common stocks.

Avoids Panic Levels.

This is said, also, despite the sharp declines in my indexes during May, 1930, and this month. As distinguished from the precipitate fall of 1929, they have been orderly declines, and they have left the lows of reaction considerably higher than the lows of last November. In fact, as the accompanying Chart 2 shows clearly, while the stock market of 1930 has repeated the history of the bull market and recession of 1929 with extraordinary closeness, it has done this without going down to panic levels.

Take the 77 days of the pronounced bull market of 1929, from May 31 to September 3. During this time the average market price of industrial common stocks rose by 22 per cent, from 173.6 (1926 equals 100) to 211.3, or at the rate of 0.29 per cent a day. This period is closely comparable with the 87 days of the 1930 bull market, from December 28 last to April 11, with its rise of 21 per cent in my industrial stock index. This rise was 0.24 per cent a day through fifteen weeks, as against the rise of 0.29 per cent a day for the thirteen weeks of the 1929 bull market.

Declines Very Similar.

The comparison of market declines during the two periods is even closer, if we exclude the panic period. For in the orderly decline of the 1929 stock market for the seven weeks between September 3 and October 21, there was a fall of 12 per cent, or 0.31 per cent a day for 39 days; whereas in 1930 there was a fall of 0.30 per cent a day, or 15 per cent in all, during the nine weeks between April 11 and June 13.

Of course, it would have been far better for the Nation, in 1929, had there been a less top-heavy credit situation or, after that credit situation had been disturbed, more intelligent and effective means to prevent the decline from degenerating into a stock panic. That is the essential difference between the two periods which I have compared, and it is encouraging, for it is all to the advantage of present conditions.

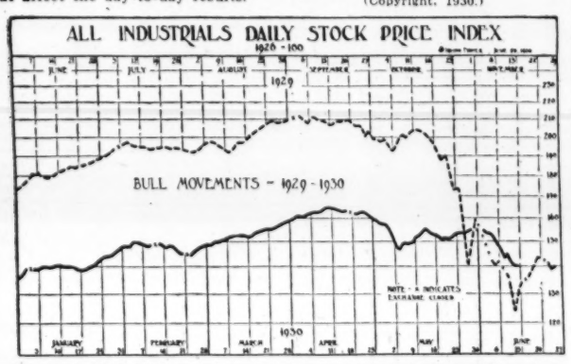

Chart 2—The bull market of 1930, and its ensuing decline, runs closely parallel to the bull market of 1929 and its primary decline to October 21.

WALL STREET GOSSIP

New York, June 22 (A.P.).—Alfred P. Sloan, jr., president of General Motors, today announced that negotiations had been completed for the sale by General Motors to the Kelsey-Hayes Wheel Corporation of the plant and manufacturing facilities of the Jaxon Steel Products Co., formerly engaged in the manufacture of wooden wheels and rims. General Motors has acquired the necessary patent rights covering the manufacture of wire wheels in one of the other divisions of the corporation.

Acquisition of the Rossville Commercial Alcohol Co., and the General Industrial Alcohol Co. by American Solvents & Chemical Corp., has been consummated by transfer of all the assets to American Solvents & Chemical. H. I. Pfeiffer resigned as president of the American Solvents and was elected chairman of the board and chairman of the executive committee. Victor M. O'Shaughnessy, of Rossville Commercial Alcohol, succeeded him as president. The Rossville company will serve as the alcohol division of the company, except on the Pacific Coast, where American Solvents & Chemical of California will function.

The National Association of Flat Rolled Steel Manufacturers reports that total sales of the sheet steel industry for the month of May were 204,589 net tons, total production was 274,220 net tons, 73.3 per cent of capacity, and total shipments amounted to 266,436 net tons.

The Pittsburgh & Lake Erie Railroad Co. reports net income for the year ended December 31, of $7,555,334, an increase of $383,444 over net income of $7,171,890 for the previous year.

New bond offerings expected next week include $5,000,000 Tri-Utilities Corporation, 5 per cent gold notes; $550,000 City of New Orleans, La., 4½ per cent gold bonds, $93,339 town of Harrison, N. Y., 4.20 per cent gold bonds; $210,000 town of Mamaroneck, N. Y., 4.30 per cent gold bonds.

Paper Money Not Wealth.

The French people once thought they were going to get rich by having the government print unlimited quantities of paper money. The result of the experiment was no real increase in wealth, but simply an increase in the amount of money to be exchanged for wealth.

SLUMP DEPRESSES STOCK INDEX LEVEL

INVESTMENTS ALSO FALL

By E. W. DIEFENDORF
(Irving Fisher Service).

With stock prices on the New York Stock Exchange declining rapidly at the opening of last week the Irving Fisher all-industrials index declined increasingly to Wednesday when the index stood at 126.2, or 2.85 per cent above the November, 1929, low of 122.7.

A sharp reaction on Thursday, followed by declines in several leading stocks on Friday, brought the level to 130.2, or 3.2 per cent above the week's low, showing a loss of 7.1 per cent over the week.

Six out of the twenty group indexes sagged below the November 13 lows, that of office equipment at 208.2 on June 19, was 2.2 per cent below the November low of 212.9; of stores, at 103.1 on June 18, 8.9 per cent below the November low of 113.2; of building supplies, at 90.5 on June 19, 5.3 per cent below the November low of 95.6; auto accessories, coppers and household goods, respectively, 13.4, 32.3 and 25.6 per cent below their November lows.

The radio, tobacco, farm machinery and electrical equipment groups made the best showing for the week.

Value of Tradings Declines.

The average daily value of common industrial stock tradings on the New York Stock Exchange dropped by 8 per cent last week to $155,100,000 from $168,500,000 in the week ended June 13. Volume of trading on June 18, $321,400,000, was the largest since May 6.

Average daily value of tradings in all stocks dropped by only 3.4 per cent to $219,000,000 with utilities and rails, two groups out of five, rising in tradings last week.

Motors, coppers, office equipment, utilities and rails made slight gains in tradings, while the remaining fifteen groups were off.

The slump in stock prices has again become international, with New York stocks off to within a few points of the low in 1929, and Paris, Berlin and London stocks below their 1929 lows.

Last week's decline in foreign exchanges by 5.5 per cent in Paris, 5.3 per cent in London and 2.6 per cent in Berlin, brought the indexes below the 1929 lows by 16 per cent in Paris, 13 per cent in London, and 0.4 per cent in Berlin. The indexes show, in Berlin and London, the largest drop for four consecutive weeks since the 1929 crash, and, in Paris, since the base year 1926.

Lowest in Paris Since 1927.

Stock prices in Paris at 112 last week, recorded the low since December, 1927, when prices had barely commenced the long bull movement that brought the index up by 95 per cent, or from 92 in January, 1927, to 179.6 on September 6, 1929. Berlin prices have shown a declining trend since 1926. London stocks closed last week at 79.7, the low since the base period (October 15, 1926). Since May 30, London stocks have dropped by 15 per cent, Paris stocks by 14 per cent and Berlin stocks by 8 per cent.

The index of 225 industrial common stocks shows what a substantially representative $100 worth of stocks in 1926 would now amount to if held unchanged since that year. This index is weighted by shares outstanding. The index of "50 most active," or market leaders, shows the result of reinvesting the $100 every week in the market favorites of that week. This index is weighted by shares traded, the list changing weekly. The last column of the tables gives the average yield per cent on these weeks' 50 leaders at current prices.

ADVICE ON INVESTMENTS

By CHARLES W. STORM.

American Hawaiian Steamship.

D. S. A.—Has a special dividend been declared by directors of the American Hawaiian Steamship Co.?

Answer—Last month directors declared a special $8 dividend out of funds for distribution to shareholders. It is payable July 15 to stockholders of record July 1 next. Early this year a special distribution of $2 a share was made.

While the dividend was not earned, income being poor, the funds were paid out of surplus, which has been augmented by the sale of certain assets of the company. The stock is highly speculative and not suitable as an investment issue for long term holding.

Ohio Oil and Transcontinental.

B. H. K.—Will the merger of Ohio Oil and Transcontinental prove beneficial to the latter company? I hold some of the stock.

Answer—The consolidation should reduce operating expenses and partly eliminate the rather large capitalization of Transcontinental, which has been a hindrance to the stock, marketwise. The new company will be among the largest producers of petroleum, and earnings as a result of the combine should show improvement.

Missouri-Kansas Pipe Line.

J. B. N.—What is the reason for the unusually sharp and swift decline in Missouri-Kansas Pipe Line on the New York Curb Market?

Answer—Bear raiding is given as the cause of the 21-point drop on Monday. The stock is believed to have been "pegged" by its sponsors around 36, but when an avalanche of selling hit the entire market, and particularly Missouri-Kansas Pipe Line, its sponsors are understood to have withdrawn support, this action being followed by wide-open breaks.

The company announced recently that it would participate in the construction of a pipe line, with others, into Omaha, Nebr. Earnings have been fair. Dividends are 10 per cent in stock. The issue, however, is regarded as a speculation.

New York Central Railroad.

T. C. D.—What accounts for the weakness of New York Central? I notice it is selling at the lowest point of the year?

Answer—In the present period of market readjustment, the good as well as the bad stocks are suffering, which accounts for the decline in New York Central, always regarded as a high-class investment issue.

Another reason for the weakness in the rails is the belief that June earnings will be far less satisfactory than those for last June, when manufacturing activity throughout the country was at its peak level. Earnings of New York Central have been good over a period of ten years and the stock has an enviable dividend record.

INDEX OF ALL BONDS FALLS DURING WEEK

REDISCOUNT RATE CUT

The reduction of the New York rediscount rate to 2½ per cent, designed to stimulate the bond market, came at the close of a week which registered the first fall since April 25 in the Irving Fisher index of all bonds. It dropped by 0.2 per cent. With stock prices declining fast, the bond price index last week registered 100.9, the low since the showing of 100.7 on May 6. The index stood at 101.2 on June 9, and then made an average decline of 0.03 per cent per day for ten trading days.

Of the 70 bonds in the Irving Fisher selection, 38 per cent were off in price at last week's close, 36 per cent up and 26 per cent showed no change over the week.

The value of trading in bonds on the New York Stock Exchange registered a 14 per cent increase last week. The volume traded on Wednesday was the largest since May 1.

United States Government bonds, up 0.03 per cent last week, have shown rising prices for seven weeks, reaching the peak on June 17 at 101.0, the 1929-1930 high for this group. An upward trend has been shown in this group since the 1929 low index of 96.3 on May 28, 1929, and a gain of 4.9 per cent in a little over a year. First grade rails and utilities also moved contrary to the market trend, closing last week up 0.31 and 0.05 per cent, respectively.

Second grade rails, off by 1.06 per cent, industrials off by 0.37 per cent and foreign government bonds off by 0.26 per cent, were responsible for the decline in the all-bonds index. First grade rails since June 9 at 105.3, have dropped by 1.52 per cent or 0.15 per cent per day to the low index since March 7.

THE MAN WHO KNOWS

608 12th St. N.W.

Over Woolworth's 5c & 10c Store

This strange man sees the way and tells it all. Just what your life has been, just what it will be. Tells you when and whom you will marry; whether husband, wife or sweetheart is true or false. Tells as to changes, travel, loss or absent friends, divorce, wills, deeds; whether it is best to buy or sell. He tells the good and the bad. A visit will convince you of his wonderful power.

Something tells you this is the man. You feel the impulse to call. Do not delay.

ACCIDENT INJURIES TAKE MAN'S LIFE; OTHERS ARE HURT

FRACTURE OF SKULL SUFFERED BY GIRL, 7

Woman Arrested After Auto Hits Pole and Strikes Two Small Boys.

One man died of injuries received on May 31 in an automobile accident and a half-dozen or more other persons were hurt, one seriously, in traffic crashes in Washington and its environs yesterday and last night.

Carl Davis, 21 years old, of 1111 Potomac avenue southeast, died yesterday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock at Casualty Hospital as the result of an auto accident on May 31. Young Davis was in a car which overturned at Fifteenth and V streets southeast and received a fractured skull. Meningitis set in as a result of the injury and he died of the disease.

A Sunday afternoon stroll with her little brother may cost the life of Helen Fowler, 7 years old, of District Heights, Md., who was seriously injured when she was struck by an automobile.

Suffers Skull Fracture.

The girl and her brother, Francis, 8 years old, were struck near their home by an automobile operated by Private James Streetman, attached to the War College. The girl suffered a skull fracture and a broken leg. Her brother suffered from shock and slight bruises. Both were taken to Casualty Hospital by Streetman, who later reported the accident to the Fifth Precinct station. Streetman was held pending the outcome of the girl's injuries.

A colored woman was arrested in Maryland yesterday after the auto she was driving collided with a telegraph pole and, caroming off, struck two little white boys. Neither of the boys was seriously hurt.

Earl E. Godfrey, 10 years old, of Wheaton, Md., received a fracture of the right leg, and Sam Corso, 12 years old, of 1309 Thirty-third street northwest was bruised on the leg. Both the boys were taken to their homes after treatment.

Two Face Charges.

The driver was Elsie Wheatley, colored, 27 years old, of Olney, Md., who was operating a car belonging to Raymond C. Frazier, colored, 41 years old, also of Olney. She lost control of the car, whereupon it struck the pole, hit the children and proceded about 60 feet before stopping, police said. She was charged with operating without a license, and reckless driving. Frazier, who was with her, was charged with permitting reckless driving.

Losing control of their machine, two motorists suffered severe injuries in the District yesterday. Clarence Leland, 26 years old, of 1129 Potomac avenue southeast, suffered severe laceration of the leg when his auto struck a tree at Eleventh and G streets southeast. Twenty-two stitches were taken in the wound at Casualty Hospital.

Robert Thornton, 24 years old, of Anacostia, D. C., suffered a possible skull fracture when his car struck a fire hydrant at Nichols avenue and M street southeast. He was removed to Casualty Hospital.

Boy Slightly Hurt.

Frederick Sander, 6 years old, of 127 Rock Creek Church road, was slightly injured yesterday afternoon when he was struck by a taxicab operated by Ashton Nixon, 45 years old, of 1230 Euclid street northwest. The boy was taken to his home, where he is under the care of the family physician.

Cut by flying glass when their auto hit a car parked on the Bradley boulevard early yesterday morning, three colored persons were treated at Georgetown University Hospital. They are Alice Brown, 19 years old, who received cuts of the scalp and neck; Selma Wade, 21 years old, whose injuries are a deep gash in the neck and lacerations of the scalp, and Marshall Brown, 20 years old, who received slight cuts about the body. All three live in Bethesda, Md. Brown, the driver, was arrested by Seventh Precinct police and turned over to Maryland authorities. He is charged with driving with dead tags.

John E. Warren, colored, 9 years old, of Silesia, Md., suffered lacerations of the face yesterday afternoon when the automobile in which he was riding with his father, John R. Warren, 33 years old, collided at Third street and Virginia avenue southwest with a machine operated by Henry Young, 29 years old, of Ballston, Va. The child was treated at Casualty Hospital.

Ralph Given, jr., son of Police Court Judge Ralph Given, reported to Bethesda police yesterday that while he was driving in Maryland Saturday night his car was sideswiped by a car driven by a man giving his name as Leonard Chambers, of 473 M street northwest. Young Given, who was alone, was unhurt, and his car was damaged only to the extent of about $20.

CARTWRIGHT TELLS OF CARTHAGE RITES

Priest Back in Washington After Having Attended Eucharistic Congress.

VIEWED PASSION PLAY

Returning after eight weeks abroad during which he attended the Eucharistic Congress at ancient Carthage and the Passion Play at Oberammergau, the Rev. Dr. John K. Cartwright, of St. Patrick's Church, declared yesterday that impressions made from the epochal sights will remain long with him.

Dr. Cartwright, who also had an audience with the Pope at Vatican City, said the trip abroad was the most stirring event in his life.

The young priest, speaking of the solemn services at Carthage, declared that they were extremely beautiful. The event, which lasted for six days amid the rolling hills of the picturesque city, will be long remembered, particularly, he said, the children's event.

Scenes From Boat.

"Gathered in the amphitheater," the priest said, "were thousands of children dressed in white robes with the insignia of the red cross of the ancient crusaders on their breasts. Each carried a huge palm and the sight from the hill above resembled a field of wheat being whipped by a light breeze. The palm fans stirring, just a wee bit, to make the effect reminding of our Western wheat fileds. The sight was so stirring that many of the pilgrims from all parts of the world stood in awe."

Because of the numerous visitors at the ancient city, Dr. Cartwright spent evenings on his boat, the hotels being filled by the faithful who gathered from all the continents of the world.

"The boat in which I made the Atlantic trip," Dr. Cartwright said, "lulled in the beautiful harbor, its lights flickering like stars. The scene could not be surpassed in beauty. More than 500 Americans aboard spent the night on the boat, taking in the land view from the sea as I did."

Departed Easter Monday.

Besides Dr. Cartwright, other priests from Washington who attended the church ceremonial included Mgr. Eugene Connolly, of St. Peter's Church, and the Rev. Thomas G. Smyth, of Blessed Sacrament Church at Chevy Chase. Father Smyth returned several weeks ago and Mgr. Connolly is now visiting in Munich, Prague and Vienna. He is expected back shortly.

Dr. Cartwright and the party of American clergymen and laymen left New York on Easter Monday morning. They passed by Gibraltar as the French fleet of 80 warships in the Mediterranean was preparing to join in the celebration of the conquest of Algiers by the French 100 years ago.

The trip abroad and return, Dr. Cartwright said, was uneventful. He said the seas were comparatively calm and that voyaging weather was excellent.

A carnival will be held throughout the week in the new auditorium of St. Augustine's Church, with special attractions each night and prize offerings. The opeing feature tonight will include a general exhibit of the new properties on Fifteenth street, between R and S streets northwest.

A fashion show will be held tomorrow night, with the succeeding nights given over to the Holy Name Guild and kindred organizations, the colored Elks, the Knights of St. John and children of the parish.

Man in Strait-Jacket Frees Self in Plane

Wriggling his way from a strait-jacket on the wing of a plane circling high above the Mount Vernon Airways flying field yesterday, J. B. (Daredevil) Leifus made an unofficial record of freeing himself in two minutes.

Leifus had planed to hang by his feet from the plane and work himself free, but the air pressure on the wing prevented him from getting off the surface of the wing.

In the cockpit with Leifus was A. H. Mettee, who lifted the little daredevil on to the wing of the machine. The pilot was E. W. Robertson, of the field. At a height of about 2,000 feet, by pushing and shoving, Leifus was placed on the wing. He said that he was nearly choked by the exhaust gases of the motor streaming into his face. After Leifus' stunt, a parachute jump from a height of 2,200 feet was made by Cracker Lee. A crowd of about 500 people gathered at the airport to watch the show.

ILLNESS OF WOMAN BLAMED FOR SUICIDE

Niece Finds Relative Dead on Floor With Pistol Lying Nearby.

HAD GONE TO TAKE NAP

An elderly woman lay down after supper last night and after meditating on her illness, police say, she drew a .38-caliber revolver and mortally wounded herself through the heart.

The woman was Lillie Herus, 47 years old, of 901 Virginia avenue southwest. She and her niece, Catherine Just, a stenographer, had eaten supper together and Miss Herus seemed in a happy mood. She told her niece she planned to take a nap. When her aunt did not appear an hour later, Miss Just went to her room and found her lying on the floor dead. The revolver lay alongside the body.

Patrolmen F. R. Gue and R. H. Knapp, of the Fourth Precinct station, were summoned. They learned that Miss Herus had been in ill health for more than a year and recently was under treatment at an Alexandria hospital.

Coroner J. Ramsay Nevitt issued a certificate of suicide.

Washington Men Face Maryland Rum Charge

John A. Allen, of E street near thirteenth street northeast and James K. Howes, of South Carolina avenue near Thirteenth street southeast were arrested yesterday morning by Corp. D. L. Snyder of the Maryland police on the Colesville pike near Four Corners, Md., and charged with possession of 36 gallons of liquor with intent to sell.

Howes, who was driving the car in which the men were riding, was also charged with displaying dead tags. Both men are free on $500 bond.

Man Severely Hurt in Fall.

Edward Hunter, 77 years old, of Rosslyn, Va., received severe lacerations to the head yesterday when he stumbled and fell against a tree while walking near his home. He was treated at Georgetown University Hospital and remained in that institution.

RIVER YIELDS BODY OF CAPITAL PAINTER

DROWNED FRIDAY NIGHT

After dragging the Potomac River for nearly 48 hours police shortly after dusk last night recovered the body of W. W. Voelter, 45-year-old painter of 363 K street northwest, about 200 feet west of the Chain Bridge, where he was drowned Friday while swimming.

Patrolman C. M. Birkegt, of the harbor police, who had spent the entire day dragging the river, discovered the body when it rose to the surface. Mr. Voelter's head was badly bruised, indicating, police say, that when he sank after suffering from an attack of cramps, his body became fastened between the rocks at the bottom. The place where Voelter was drowned is one of the most treacherous points in the river. Police thought for a time that the swift current might have carried the body some distance down the river, but nevertheless continued to drag at the point where Voelter was seen to go under.

The body was removed to the District Morgue at 7:30 o'clock and two hours later it was identified by F. L. Kidwell, business agent for Painters' Union, Local 368.

Voelter and several other men, after finishing work Friday, decided to go swimming. Voelter was the first to dive into the river and was followed in a few minutes by August Grove, 21 years old. Voelter suddenly was swept beneath the surface by the dangerous eddies. Grove made a neat dive to rescue his friend, but was stunned when his head struck the rock bed of the river. When he came up he made his way to the shore. In the meantime other friends had attempted to find Voelter, but his body had vanished.

"Hobo King" Held On Drunk Charge

Daniel F. O'Brien Discovered "Sleeping" in Street, Policeman Says.

Daniel F. O'Brien, 68 years old, self-styled "king of the hoboes," was arrested last night on a charge of drunkenness and locked up at the First Precinct. Private F. W. Leeper, who made the arrest, said that O'Brien had gone to sleep on the sidewalk in New York avenue near Twelfth street northwest.

O'Brien, who gave his address as 805½ Tenth street northwest, is a more or less familiar figure in Washington. Apparently well-educated, the man has broken into the news several times before. He was the promoter of the "bread-line" which functioned last winter in the 500 block of G street northwest.

Interviewed in his cell, he said, in a rich brogue, that he had been locked up for "sleeping." He also said that it was fortunate that he was locked up, because he is writing a series of articles for a magazine on jail life, and he welcomed the opportunity to get local color.

10,000 Persons Visit Post Home Before Sale

More than 10,000 persons visited The Washington Post model home at 7605 Fourteenth street northwest, in the fashionable part of Shepherd Park section, during the four weeks it was open for public inspection.

The home is now closed for inspection, having been sold by its builders, L. E. Breuninger & Sons, Inc., developers of Shepherd Park, to S. H. Rose, official of Station WRC of the National Broadcasting Co.

UNION RITES HELD BY TWO CHURCHES IN STEP TO MERGE

First Presbyterian Members Gather With Covenant Congregation.

OLDER GROUP MARKS 135TH ANNIVERSARY

"Modern Sun Worshippers" Is Theme of Sermon by Dr. McCartney.

Members of the First Presbyterian Church, the oldest congregation of that denomination in the city, worshipped with the members of the Church of the Covenant yesterday.

It was the first public step toward union of these two leading Presbyterian congregations of Washington, tentatively approved by both. The Rev. Dr. Albert Joseph McCartney, new minister of the Church of the Covenant, extended the welcome, and the Rev. Dr. Newton Preston Patterson, minister of the First Church, accepted his invitation to participate in the service of the Covenant pending consummation of the merger early in the fall.

Dr. Patterson said this event celebrated the 135th anniversary of the June Sunday morning in 1795 when a handful of early Washington Christians met in a carpenter shop which stood on a site now included in the White House grounds and formed the congregation which grew into the First Presbyterian Church.

Turning of Backs on God.

On the theme "Modern Sun Worshippers," Dr. McCartney preached his last sermon before leaving this week for California to join Mrs. McCartney and their two sons for their vacation. Taking his text from the eighth chapter of Ezekiel, sixteenth verse, he warned against the fate of the ancient Hebrews who turned their backs toward the temple of the Lord "and worshiped the sun toward the East."

Even as these Hebrews of the prophet's day turned their backs on the religion of their fathers, people who call themselves rationalists and free thinkers are turning their backs on the religion of their fathers and mothers, he said. Others, embittered by the disasters and catastrophes of life, declare they are agnostics and "through with religion." They scoff at all things serious and seek to drown their feelings in pleasure.

Getting "Back to Nature."

"There is more in this scripture than a mere picture of turning against ancestral religion," Dr. McCartney said. "The attitude of these primitive worshippers toward the sun reminds us of the attitude that many people hold toward religion in this present world. They are nature worshippers. The apostles of this cult of the open air are all around us—novelists, lecturers, dramatists, parlor philosophers. They preach a gospel of freedom from all restraint. For this worship of the sun means nothing less than doing as you please. Let nature be your guide! Be yourself!

"There is another significance in the statement that these persons worship with their faces toward the sun, and it is in keeping with this modern philosophy of nature worship. They insist upon looking only upon the bright side of life. It is the religion of optimism. No doubt this is reflected in the changed tone of evangelical churches. There is a popular demand to face our worshippers toward the sun as a means of filling empty pews.

"We have no quarrel with such a program, but if we are going to do that we must do a thorough job of it. We must really lift people out of their troubles, but we must guard against shallow optimism. Happiness must be more than skin deep.

Joy's Real Foundation.

"We must have a real foundation in joy and that foundation is the Gospel of Jesus. No permanent, hopeful outlook on life can be found outside the cross of Christ. It alone promises forgiveness for sins and hope of life to come.

"Are we losing sight of the cross in our philosophy of religion, trying to draft a scheme of redemption with no place in it for the altar? Are we seeking the benefits and privileges of religion without its responsibilities? It is no sin to adore God's sunshine or to demand health and hope and happiness in life, but it may be to insist upon these at the expense of duty, sacrifice and service."

Dr. Patterson will preach at the Church of the Covenant next Sunday.

Policeman Shoots Man During Attack

Opponent Wrests Nightstick From Him and Uses It as Weapon.

Attacked by a colored man who assaulted him with his own nightstick, Private Velt Braziel, of the Second Precinct, last night shot the man through the stomach.

Braziel answered a call to a house in the 1400 block of Eighth street, and attempted to arrest Theodore Jackson, colored, 24 years old, of that address. Wresting the baton from the policeman, the colored man struck him twice and fled toward the rear of the house. Braziel, his gun in his hand, went to look for him and when the man leaped at him again he fired once.

Jackson was taken to Gallinger Hospital, suffering from alcoholism and a bullet wound in the stomach. Braziel's injuries were said to be not serious.

Man Beaten to Death in Fight.

Thomas Carter, Negro, 27 years old, of C street near Fifteenth street southeast, was beaten to death by a trio of Negroes last night. Police learned that there was a fight in the rear of South Carolina avenue near Thirteenth street, and that Carter was left lying unconscious in the alley. He died before Casualty Hospital physicians could render aid.

DR. JOHN C. PALMER.

Under bright skies the ninth season of divine services under the auspices of the Masons of the District of Columbia, were inaugurated yesterday afternoon, under the Treaty Oak on Temple Heights. A large company was in attendance. The music was conducted by the Eastern Star.

In accordance with custom, the opening sermon was preached by the Grand Chaplain of the Grand Lodge, the Rev. Dr. John C. Palmer, who took a double text: "As the Hart Panteth After the Water Brooks, So Panteth My Soul After Thee, O God." Psalm 42:1. And: "He Hath Set Eternity in Our Heart." Ecclesiastes 3:11.

"Religion is the relating of a man's life—his thoughts, his work, his hopes, his desires—to God the great Creator and Father," Dr. Palmer began.

"Man is incurably religious. He may be alien to the church; may not observe its customs and traditions. But as certainly as the rivers run to the sea; as surely as the needle turns to the pole; as irresistibly as the tide sweeps out to the boundless deep; just so inevitably, in his profoundest needs and aspirations, man reaches out to the great Unseen and Eternal.

Religious Quarrels Bitterest.

"The very circumstances under which we meet today suggest the gracious propriety of avoiding a divisive spirit in our discussion. The bitterest of all quarrels are religious quarrels. The darkest pages of human history are those that record the wars of religion. Our most vindictive prejudices are our religious prejudices. We can abide in friendly fellowship only as we yield ourselves to the magnetic attraction of the eternal verities. Four paths may lead to the mountain top. They may start from the four points of the compass. But those paths must come together at the summit. Brethren, is not that a parable of human life? Jew and Gentile, Protestant and Catholic, we start on our dierent roads to the start on our different roads to the ously our own traditions that divide us. But if ever we reach the pearly gates, we must dwell together in the City of God.

"Let us this afternoon think of some yearnings of the human heart that are common to all. David's passionate cry, 'So panteth my soul after Thee, O God,' was forced from his lips by the stern experiences through which he was passing. But there are in all of us instinctive cravings, and till they find their satisfaction there is no rest for the soul, no peace for the mind. If we can find Him whom David longed for, we shall find the all in all."

Four Main Points.

With this exordium, the minister then enlarged upon four main points which he deduced from his texts. They were the great things the human heart yearns for, and were as follows:

1. Some worthy work for our hands.
2. Some worthy one to love and be loved by.
3. Man craves for some sop for his conscience.
4. The craving for God Himself.

"No man can be perfectly happy in permanent idleness," said the minister. "We work, we slave, we scrimp and save to accumulate sufficient funds and property to relieve us of the necessity of toil. Then when we have laid down the working tools and joined the envied company of indolent retired we wake to discover that life has lost its zest. To cease service is to become atrophied. When toil ceases, growth ceases. For a young man or woman never to find a worthy outlet for the energies of body and mind; no constructive task that will, like the coral building its island home in the sea, leave some life-record of character and effort, oh, that is tragic!"

Man's Yearning for Love.

Man's yearning for love is one of the noblest passions that animates his soul, the minister went on. "Since the world began, unselfish love has been the highest outreach of the heart and its richest blessing. It has nerved the weak and lowly to acts of heroism. It has enabled the sufferer to endure and the despairing to hope again. It has won the evil-minded to a life of goodness and has brought the purest hearted to a holier consecration. We live in a world of hate and selfishness. Nature in forest and jungle is cruel and relentless; the weaker find no mercy. And sometimes it seems as if this law of the jungle had become the law of men and of nations. But the Master said, 'I give you a new commandment; that ye love one another, as I have loved you.' To be governed by one's hatreds, to cherish our grudges and ill-will is to have a constantly shriveling soul.

"To be a stranger and alone, with throngs of people crowding you on a city's streets, is more pitiful than to be anhungered and athirst on the pathless desert."

After giving an illuminating discussion of the human conscience, "the profoundst mystery of our life," in which he quoted from Emanuel Kant, the German philospher: "Two things fill my soul with wonder, ever increasing, ever deepening. The starry heavens above me, and the moral law within me," Dr. Palmer defined conscience as "that something within us (which) brings us to judgment for the wrong." And then showed how to conflicting currents in human life struggle for mastery of man and when the evil passion wins, man falls into a life of sin from which only a Redeemer can save him.

Man's Craving for God.

This brought the discussion to its climax, man's craving for God Himself. This, the minister said, is our deepest craving. "Nothing so dignifies our labor as to consider and accept it as a God-appointed task." he concluded. "That makes a man unconquerable. As for friends, there is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother. 'When my father and my mother forsake me then the Lord will take me up.' When other helpers fail and comforts flee, O Thou who changest not, abide with me.

"In his great lyric, Tennyson pictures the soul at death as moving out across the bar to meet the great Pilot. But there is in life, as well, a similar quest. 'When that which stirs from out the boundless deep, turns again home.' That craving sooner or later comes to every human heart. It is a desire to know Him; to enjoy His favor and protection; to feel His strength and comfort. To hear His voice; to feel about us the everlasting arms. Can you show me such a mighty One? I see Him not, and yet I can not live without Him. I hear him not, yet I wait for His voice more than they that wait for the morning.

"The greatest thing we know is man; the greatest thing in man is his mind and soul; upright, incorruptible, compassionate, loving. Through these virtues of our own humanity we ascend in faith and adoring love to our Father God! This is our faith. To it we cling in spite of the mysteries of sin and pain and death. In the presence of the Worthiest, of Him we call the Son of Man, whom some of us worship as the Son of God, we believe in the dear, eternal Fatherhood of God!

"O brothers, if my faith is vain,
If hopes like these betray,
Pray for me my feet may gain
The sure and safer way.

"And Thou, O Lord, by whom are seen
Thy creatures as they be,
Forgive me, if too close I lean
My human heart on Thee."

Camp Roosevelt Will Open Today

100 Boy Scouts Prepared to Make Merry at Calvert Cliffs Retreat.

The Bay Scout camp on Chesapeake Bay, Camp Roosevelt, at Calvert Cliffs, Md., opens today with more than 100 scouts ready to go. Accommodations have been made, however, for 250. In 1929 more than 500 scouts spent a part of their vacation at the camp.

The camp offers salt water bathing, without undertow, 50 acres of woodland and a carefully selected staff of leaders. The national council of the scout organization has rated Camp Roosevelt "Grade A," the highest rating which a scout camp can have.

There are five vacation periods of two weeks each until the camp closes on August 24. The last two weeks have been set aside for the vacations of scoutmasters. Boating, canoeing, fishing, hiking, nature study, good food and fellowship are expected to attract even more scouts than attended the camp last year.

Had it not been for the quick action of Dr. John M. Farrington, of 302 K street northeast, who was pitching for the St. Joseph's Team, in stopping the flow of blood and rushing the child to the hospital, it is said that the patient might have died.

He was taken to Casualty Hospital, where it was said he had received lacerations of the scalp and possible concussion of the brain. As his condition was undetermined, he stayed at the hospital. The Mohawks were playing St. Joseph's at the playground.

Armed Woman Puts Police, Seeking Burglar, to Rout

Almost any policeman will fight it out with an armed burglar, especially after he has aroused the neighborhood with the shrill whistle of a siren and the clanging of a patrol auto bell, but it's asking too much to have him face an enraged woman with a shotgun in her hands.

Montgomery County, Md., police were called at 2 o'clock yesterday morning by residents of Woodside to drive out a burglar in the supposedly vacant home of Edward W. Koch, who, with his family had gone to a beach for the week-end.

With sirens screaming and bells clanging, Sergt. Guy L. Jones and Corpl. George Windham, of the Silver Spring substation, and Constable Bernard Fling rushed to the Koch residence. A parked auto, set as if for a quick getaway, confirmed the report, and in a few minutes they surrounded the house.

Unable to drive out their prey by banging on locked doors and windows, they finally procured a ladder, and Sergt. Jones and Constable Fling climbed to the roof of the front porch, above which was an open window, as a growing crowd of spectators stood by.

Just then their progress was halted by a stern: "What are you fellows doing here?" as a determined-looking woman appeared in the window with a menacing shotgun.

"Don't shoot We're police," the men responded as they fell over each other going down the ladder.

A brief dialogue revealed that the occupant was the sister of Mrs. Koch and that she belonged there. So the police hurried away without asking her name, grateful for their escape, and the solicitous neighbors scurried back to their respective homes and beds.

Youth Who Chose Open Road To Home Repents in Capital

There hangs in the dim-lighted parlor of almost every New England home a treasured hand-wrought motto. "There Is No Place Like Home," announces the motto, which may be embroidered on a white linen guest towel, painted on a china platter, or, in less sentimental domiciles, merely printed on a piece of white card and hung in a gingerbread frame of brown walnut.

Through all his 16 years, Robert Louis Brockway had seen that slogan on the wall in his own home at Torrington, Conn., but he never gave it much serious consideration until three weeks ago, when an insidious skepticism crept into his thoughts. He looked at the motto in a new light, disbelieving.

"Aw, boloney!" he sneered disrespectfully at the placard, and determined to investigate the truth of its slogan. With his pal, Bernard Orlowski, also 16, of Bridgeport, Conn., he set forth to see the world. Neither had a cent, but when they could not beg food they would work for hetir meals in restaurants.

So long as they were together, each lending moral support to the other, life on the open highways2was endurable, but yesterday theyreached Washington, and in some way that still is puzzling him last night Robert Louis became separated from his companion. Terrified by the thought of carrying on alone, Robert Louis broke down completely when sight of the White House reminded him of home.

He notified Policeman G. A. Williams, of the Sixth Precinct, that perhaps there might be some truth in the motto on the wall, and after hearing the boy's tale the police communicated with his family.
